Capone for President?
No Trousers for Gandhi.
A World Sugar Price.
Free Food Is Old.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE NEW YORK fish dealers pay one set of racketeers for protection from thieves and various gangsters and say they like the system. They pay for racketeer protection, and they get it. They are better off than they were before, only paying taxes for government protection.

This opens many possibilities, even a "Capone for President" possibility. We might have our modern racketeer condottiere, as Venice had her colleoni. Instead of public officials that accept places on the racketeers' and bootleggers' payrolls, why not hire the racketeers direct, and do the best we can under our new kind of civilization?

THE LATEST NEWS about the Indian leader, Gandhi, might have added a chapter to Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus." Going to London to talk to the British powers, he will wear trousers, which he never wears in India.

He may even shave off his "pigtail," a long tuft of hair worn in obedience to the Hindu religion, which teaches that it may be used by friends to pull the dead man out of hell.

However, Gandhi says he will positively not wear a stiff shirt and the King won't see him wearing silk knee breeches. He says "I am ugly enough without such foppery."

We all have our ideas about how to dress. When Sir Augustus Harris, boss of London's Drury Lane Theater, asked George Bernard Shaw, then a young man, to come to the opera in evening clothes, Shaw took off his suit of brown flannel, and put on a dress suit, but wore his brown flannel jaeger shirt with the dress suit.

Harris said:

"Please go back to the jaeger ensemble. I like it better."

AT A CONFERENCE in Paris, following an all-night session, seven nations agreed on uniform world price for sugar. Beet and cane growers are included in the arrangement.

The world would be benefited if so great an industry were stabilized on a fair basis. Fortunately for the stabilizers Russia is not yet important as a factor in sugar production, but her potential beet sugar territory is great.

WHEN PROSPERITY and jobs are plentiful, what is commonly called "radicalism" goes to sleep. Lowered wages and many idle, bring radicalism back to waking activity.

In New York the I. W. W. demands "free food." It is cheaper and safer, temporarily, to give free food than not to give it, to say nothing of the teachings of Christianity by which we are supposed to be influenced.

But free food as a permanent institution would be dangerous. The Romans demanded it, and got it, and you know what happened there.

A LITTLE MORE life and hope in Wall street yesterday. The markets were "quietly cheerful." Unfilled orders of the Big Steel company increased 30,136 tons in March, whereas they decreased 167,157 in February.

Railroad stocks were feeling better.

Uncle Sam's stock of gold last Wednesday totaled $4,706,000,000, four millions higher than ever before. That's doing well when you consider that the world's total monetary gold supply is less than 11 billions.

It isn't what you would call a husky Wall street, reminding you rather of a lady convelescing and coughing gently as they move her out into the sunshine

CHARLES W. A. SCOTT has lowered, by nine hours, the flying time from England to Australia.

Miss Eleanor Smith, the courageous girl who recently became unconscious in her airplane and dropped 15,000 feet, has gone up again after the altitude record. This time she appears to have brought it down, with a record of 32,000 feet.

Considering their limited opportunities and the general inclination to discourage women to do something serious, the women do better than men in the air.

REVOLUTION CONTINUES active and dangerous in Portugal. The government head rules from inside the 3rd Artillery barracks, protected by barbed wire entanglements, machine guns and artillery.

Far off in the Atlantic Ocean the Azores, belonging to Portugal, are reported in rebel hands. They are the disagreeable part of a "far-flung" empire. Some far-flung part may get away, a fact that compels England to watch India closely, and to show infinite patience.

EAKER AIMS AT 12-HOUR RECORD

Army Captain Will Make One Stop in Flight; 300 See Take-Off From Burbank

International News Service.

UNITED AIRPORT, BURBANK, Cal., April 11.—Capt. Ira Eaker, Army test pilot, hopped off from here at 3:30:37 a. m. today (Pacific standard time) on an attempted one-stop record flight to New York. He will refuel at Wichita, Kan., and hopes to reach New York before sundown.

Weather conditions over his flying route were reported to be generally fair. A slight tailwind may help him on the first part of his flight.

300 SEE TAKE-OFF

About 300 persons saw Eaker take off. The plane appeared to be functioning perfectly as he warmed it up for the trans-continental flight.

Asked about his supply of gas, Capt. Eaker replied, as he patted one of his pockets:

"I have plenty of cigars with me, so I am not worrying about my fuel supply."

This is Eaker's second attempt to span the continent in record time. Recently, he was forced down in a small town in Kentucky and his plane was badly damaged. He himself escaped with slight injuries.

HAWKS HOLDS RECORD

The record for the flight is held by Frank Hawks, who streaked across the country in 12 hours and 25 minutes.

With his fuel tanks carrying 360 gallons of gasoline, Capt. Eaker figured that this supply would be ample to take him to Wichita. His plane was not equipped with a radio.

The supply of food he carried was limited. It consisted of an apple and an orange and two quarts of milk.

By maintaining an average speed of 220 miles an hour Eaker declared he could cross the continent in 11 hours and 15 minutes

Eaker expects to land at Lewis or Mitchell Field, in New York, between 5 and 6 o'clock this afternoon, New York time.

In making a one-stop flight, Eaker hoped to prove that such a flight could be made faster than a non-stop one.

Kline's Condition Further Improved

Additional improvement was noted today in the condition of Maryor Charles H. Kline, who is a patient in St. Francis Hospital The rule against visitors had not been revoked, however, pending further improvement.

The Mayor has suffered from boils, the malignant carbuncle which necessitated his removal from Cambridge Springs to the hospital, a touch of bronchitis and an attack of laryngitis during the last month.

AUTOS KILL 2, INJURE 6

Two men are dead and two women and a boy seriously injured as a result of automobile accidents in the district last night. One of the injured women today was unconscious in the Presbyterian Hospital unidentified. Three other persons were hurt.

Fred Mullen, 58, of 5558 Black street, died this morning in the Homeopathic Hospital several hours after he and his wife, Fannie, 50, were struck by an automobile while crossing North Negley avenue at Black street. Mrs Mullen is in critical condition in the West Penn Hospital. William Ireland, 19, of the William Pitt Apartments, Negley avenue and Elmer street, was arrested as the driver.

Ireland, lacking owner and driver cards, according to police, was arrested on a charge of violat-

YOUNG BANDITS LOOT STORE

Holding the manager, James Heddle, at bay with revolvers, two young men this morning held up a store of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, at 2121 Perrysville avenue, North Side. Heddle told police the men entered the store, forced him behind a counter and told him to hold up his hands.

They removed $10 in change from a cash register. The bandits fled from the store and ran in the direction of Fineview, according to the police. They were not apprehended.

Dempsey on Way to Reno; Friends Deny Divorce

NEW YORK, April 11.—(INS.)—Close friends of Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, today made light of reports that the former fighter had gone to Nevada to establish a residence with a view to obtaining a divorce from his beautiful wife, Estelle Taylor, motion picture star.

While in New York recently Dempsey talked frankly with his friends about the rumors that he and his wife had separated. He admitted that there had been quarrels, but he steadfastly maintained that there was no thought on his part of obtaining a divorce At that time he said he planned a visit with friends in Nevada, adding:

"When I go there I suppose the report will go out that I am going to get a divorce. But I have no such intentions."

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 11.—(INS.)—Jack Dempsey was on his way to Reno today "for his health." Dempsey passed through here late yesterday for Nevada, but refused to discuss a reported rift in his marital relations.

LOS ANGELES, April 11.—(AP.)—Estelle Taylor, film actress, wife of Jack Dempsey, refused to comment last night on his projected six-weeks visit at Reno, Nev.

LONGWORTH'S BODY HOME FOR BURIAL

Mouring Thousands Crowd Cincinnati Station to Pay Tribute to Dead Speaker

By H. EARL WILSON
International News Service.

CINCINNATI, April 11.—Just as the first rays of the sun began sifting through the early morning mist of this Ohio Valley city today, a train rolled into Union Station here bearing the body of Nicholas Longworth, late speaker of the United States House of Representatives.

Deaf to the hubbub of his native metropolis and blind to the saddened gaze of downcast friends, the statesman was being returned to receive a last tribute and to be buried in the city where his fathers came 127 years ago to build a family fortune.

THOUSANDS AT STATION

Thousands of Mr. Longworth's fellow townsmen—men, women and children of every age, race and occupation—jammed the depot to pay humble tribute to Mr. Longworth.

Hardly a whisper escaped their lips as they stood, heads reverently bowed, when Mrs. Alice Longworth, "Princess Alice," the wife that Mr. Longworth courted and won in the White House, hurried from the private car, where she had kept vigil over the bronze casket of her husband on its journey from Aiken, S. C., to an automobile awaiting her.

Wearing deep black mourning, and heavily veiled, "Princess Alice" took the arms of her brothers, Kermit and Archibald Roosevelt, and walked with brave strides to the automobile. Once in the automobile she relaxed against the soft cushions, determined to remain brave through today's ordeal.

PAULINA TOLD

At the Longworth home, Paulina, 6-year-old daughter of the Speaker and Mrs. Longworth, was united with her mother for the first time since the death of her father. Prior to the arrival of Mrs. Longworth, Paulina had not been told of her father's death.

This afternoon the entire nation will bow its head in grief as the President of the United States, the Vice President, scores of dignataries and persons from the humbler walks of life pay their last adieu to Mr Longworth.

Four Families Flee In Monessen Fire

MONESSEN, Pa., April 11.—Four families were forced to flee their homes by fire which did damage estimated at $15,000 to the Monessen Plumbing and Electrical Supply Company here early today. Fire Chief W. B. Laird, who estimated the damage, said the flames were confined to the basement where the fire originated. The fire was in a three-story apartment building.

Mother, Child, 4, Die in Home Blast

NANSEMOND, Va., April 11.—(AP.)—An explosion of kerosene used in starting a kitchen fire cost the lives of a mother and her 4-year-old daughter last night, and resulted in serious injuries to a son, aged 6.

The victims were Mrs. Mary C. Amos, 30, and daughter Bernice The injured child is John Amos, Jr.

REPPERT LISTS SAVINGS ON CITY WORK

Will Show Costs Reduced Millions by Changes in Contracts, Engineer Says

Declaring he intended to prove that certain changes in contract specifications had saved the city of Pittsburgh several million dollars, Chief Engineer Charles M. Reppert, of the Department of Public Works, today announced a tabulation of city work involving 358 projects.

The tabulation will be read into the record of the public hearing upon Attorney Henry Oliver Evans' charges of inefficiency in the Public Works Department when it is resumed before City Council on Monday. Reppert's tabulation starts with work done in 1929 and includes street work, retaining walls, roadways and ramps. He said:

"I hope to prove and read into the record how certain changes made in the specifications during that time lessened the cost percentage between the contract price and the final estimates. The work will involve several million dollars."

Attorney Evans contends that the changes in the specifications did not reduce exorbitant gross percentages.

A committee of five engineers to investigate the technical department of the Department of Public Works has been authorized by the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania. The names will probably be submitted to City Council Monday.

Attorney Evans, who intends to call 68 city inspectors for questioning when the hearing is resumed, also plans to question Director Edward G. Lang concerning appointments in the department.

The department's prosecutor has also completed a tabulation of millions of dollars worth of city street and sewer improvements in addition to that already brought into the councilmanic investigation. The list will bring Evans' charges up to the present and has been made for comparisor, with those contracts which preceded 1929.

SPINSTER'S SLAYER MAY ESCAPE TRIAL

State Hints Mental Test Will Be Asked; Killing Laid to Hallucinations

WILKES-BARRE, April 11. — (AP.) — Mrs. Frances Thomsen, 29, Pittsburgh, the former school teacher who yesterday confessed the slaying of Miss Minnie Dilley, 76, eccentric and wealthy spinster, will be arraigned at a preliminary hearing here today, but authorities expressed doubt whether she will face trial.

While attorneys for Mrs. Thomsen—who is a college graduate and daughter of a former minister—indicated today they will not raise the question of sanity, District Attorney Thomas M. Lewis intimated a request will be made for a sanity examination.

Detectives working on the case believe Mrs. Thomsen labored under hallucinations which inspired frenzied jealousy.

NEW EVIDENCE

Evidence, as yet undisclosed, is expected to play an important part in today's hearing before Judge W. S. McLean.

Taken to the Forty Fort home where the battered body of the spinster was found last Saturday morning, Mrs. Thomsen yesterday told authorities she killed Miss Dilley in self-defense.

Arrested in Pittsburgh Wednesday night, Mrs. Thomsen said Miss Dilley had "a strange influence" over her husband, Carl Thomsen, and that she tried to have him assume the leadership of a "love cult composed of former school teachers."

HUSBAND STANDS BY

Mrs. Thomsen, in re-enacting the tragedy yesterday, said she had hitch-hiked from her home in Pittsburgh, had beaten the spinster over the head with a filled ginger-ale bottle, and after rendering her unconscious had taken a large bread knife from her umbrella and slashed the throat of the prostrate woman. Then she returned to Pittsburgh.

Letters authorities said Mrs. Thomsen had written to Miss Dilley, and which led to her arrest, are to be produced at the hearing today.

Carl Thomsen, the husband of the defendant, is expected in Wilkes-Barre today. It is understood that he cannot be called to testify at the hearing. The district attorney's office indicated that there will be a number of witnesses called, among them several who have been found who say they saw Mrs. Thomsen in Wyoming Valley during the week of the murder.

COUNSEL HIRED HERE

Attorney Lois D. McBride, of Pittsburgh, let it be known today that she had been retained by graduates of Wellsley College as a member of counsel for Mrs. Thomsen. Attorney McBride said that what part she will play in the defense will not be determined immediately, but that, in any case, she would look after Mrs. Thomsen's interests in Pittsburgh.

Spring Weather Aids King George

LONDON, April 11.—(INS.)—Warm spring weather helped today to speed King George to recovery from the attack of subacute bronchitis, but his physicians orderd him to remain in his room at Windsor Castle for another few days.

It was officially stated His Majesty continued to make rapid improvement. He has been confined since Easter Sunday.

WATER COMBINE DEAL ASSAILED

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, April 11.—Financial activities attending the Pittsburgh Suburban Water Company were revealed before the House committee investigating utilities yesterday by Patrick Keady, Pittsburgh accountant.

Keady testified that its holding company, the Federal Water Company, bought this and eight other water concerns in the state, "reorganized" their financial structure by issuing bonds and preferred stock for an amount approximating their investment, then pocketed most of the cash.

PUBLIC 'HOLDS BAG'

The issues were sold "solely for the common stockholders, which is the Federal Power, and for the bankers," Keady told the committee, adding the public was left holding the bag. He said:

Missing Picture Hints Mary Garden Quits

CHICAGO, April 11.—(AP.)—The Tribune said today that verification of rumors that Mary Garden will be missing from the roster of artists of the Chicago Civic Opera Company when the season starts this coming fall was indicated indirectly yesterday.

Opera fans, the Tribune said, who looked at the photographs of the stars of the company, just placed in the window of the opera house, "noted the absence of the soprano, who for past seasons has been acknowledged the best drawing card in the entire galaxy."

Officials of the company could not be reached for comment.

MUSMANNO CHALLENGES PINCHOT ON COAL POLICE BILL

GOVERNOR'S MEASURE ATTACKED

Representative Urges Civic Club Fight 'Debasing' Plan, Asks Backing for His Own

Asking for active public support of his coal and iron police bills now pending in the Judiciary General Committee of the House of Representatives in Harrisburg, Representative Michael A. Musmanno yesterday threw down the gauntlet to Gov. Gifford Pinchot and pledged his wholehearted opposition to the administration measure.

The occasion was an open forum of the Civic Club of Allegheny County, in the William Penn Hotel. Musmanno was the principal speaker, outlining in brief, the abuses of the police system and the remedies proposed for it in his and other pending bills.

SCORES PINCHOT PLAN

Musmanno said:

"The measure advocated by Gov. Pinchot is absolutely vicious.

"The system outlined in House Bill No. 1035 is infinitely worse than the original coal and iron police system under whose reign of terror John Borkowski was murdered and countless hundreds of other persons were cruelly victimized.

"Under this Pinchot plan, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania debases itself by selling the police powers of the state.

"Borkowski may be killed and Pagans may be illegally arrested and imprisoned in defiance of all laws of humanity, but there can be no redress, according to the actual wording of this bill. It specifically states that the commonwealth shall not be responsible for any damage done or injuries caused through the acts or omissions of these state industrial police.

FEARS PRIVATE 'ARMY'

"Under this system a governor may build up a private army, because there is no limitation in the act to the number of police that may be selected, trained and maintained."

After Musmanno's speach, representatives of the local Civil Liberties Union suggested support of Musmanno's bill No. 2, abolishing the entire system, with no substitute. The Representative, however, said this was not politically practicable.

Closing the meeting with an appeal that the public write and wire to Senator William H. Ernest, of the Judiciary General Committee, asking him to release the bills from committee where Musmanno accused him of holding them against majority sentiment, the speaker accused "unseen forces" of quietly and secretly opposing the reforms.

Meadville Officer Escapes Gunmen

MEADVILLE, Pa., April 11.—(AP.)—Chief of Police Joseph S. Cannon escaped a hail of bullets as he was patrolling the road skirting Conneaut Lake in the early morning hours yesterday. Three shots rang out as he approached an automobile parked without lights. The bullets struck Cannon's car.

When Cannon opened fire upon the parked automobile, it started off and outdistanced his machine. Cannon said he had received several telephone calls earlier reporting a robbery near the scene and said he believed they were attempts to lure him there.

Two Bandits Beat Driver, Take Auto

Joseph Cowan, Jr., of Gibsonia, was beaten by two bandits who leaped on the running board of his automobile at Ridge and Galveston avenues last night. The thugs stole $8 from Cowan and after ordering him out of the machine, drove off in it. The car was found abandoned at Ridge and Irwin avenues a short time later.

Keady testified that in 1928, the Federal Power "reorganized" the Pittsburgh Suburban Water Company after investing $1,482,273 in it. Bonds and preferred stock were issued, the public furnishing $1,077,045. The company itself was permitted to retain approximately $400,000 of the original investment. The holding company got most of the remainder, and in addition, kept control of the company through common stock.

QUOTES DIVIDENDS

Keady said during 1928 the Suburban Water Company common stock paid 11.46 per cent dividend, and in 1929, 14.21 per cent. At the same time, the bonds paid 5 per cent and the preferred stock paid 5½ per cent. Keady said:

"The Federal Power Company got $630,000 in cash out of the bond sale."

He explained that the concern, formerly known as the Ohio Valley Water Company, is a part of the Pennsylvania Water Service, in turn under the Federal Water concern. But, he said, there are several companies of still higher strata involved. The Suburban serves consumers in the North Boroughs, McKees Rocks and Stowe Township districts, and a part of Pittsburgh, he added.

Greentree to Vote On School Bonds

PINCHOT MEETS CANAL GROUP

HARRISBURG, April 11.—A delegation of Pittsburghers among the members of the Ohio River Canal Commission, met Gov. Pinchot yesterday, giving their first report on the recently approved organization.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, Capt. W. B. Rodgers, John Eichenauer, Councilman W. Y. English, and Alexander Dann, chairman of the commission, attended. Frank Purnell, of Youngstown, was the only member missing.

Augmenting the party were James Rae, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; Ray Sprigle, Col. J. P. Leaf, of Rochester, Pa., and Secretary of Property and Supplies James F. Malone. The meeting was a closed one.

Lieut. Gov. Emmett Branch, of Indiana, was unexpectedly attacked by illness when he arrived on a train today to attend the funeral. He was removed from the train by police and rushed in an ambulance to General Hospital. The nature of his illness was not immediately known.

PERMIT PUBLIC SERVICES

The sealed casket containing the remains of the Speaker was affectionately removed from the noisy train in Union Station to a hearse, the purr of whose motor could scarcely be heard as it glided over strangely-silent downtown streets and out to the edge of the city where lies "Rockwood," the family home of the Longworths for the last three generations.

Agreeing that the funeral of the congressional leader should be a public function, friends in charge of the rites changed their original plans to hold only private services at the picturesque Longworth estate. Instead, they will be held in Christ Episcopal Church in the heart of Cincinnati.

In that old brick church, and surrounded by President Herbert Hoover, Vice President Charles Curtis, Gov. George White and other dignataries, Mr. Longworth will receive the services of the Episcopal church this afternoon at two o'clock.

Following the services, the funeral procession will wind its way through the city to Spring Grove Cemetery, where the body will be laid to rest under a family monument that already towers over two other Longworths.

BROUN CRITICAL OF MAYORS IN TALK HERE

New Yorker Weary of Walker's 'Party' Rule; Favors Job Insurance

Heywood Broun, New York newspaper columnist and one-time congressional candidate on the Socialist ticket, attacked mayors and economic depressions in an address last night at a public meeting in Carnegie Music Hall, sponsored by the Pittsburgh branch, Socialist party.

Broun indorsed employment insurance as an immediate aid to the unemployment problem, but not a permanent cure.

He said:

"It is set that the United States is going to have periods of prosperity and periods of depression under the present system. I think we should strike boldly at the roots of the problem. Unemployment insurance does not do this, but it does take some of the risk of unemployment off the shoulders of the workers."

CALAMITIES NEEDED

He declared that today we are living in under an economic system which requires a calamity to use up the excess production.

He continued:

"I see no relief in shifting between two parties having no very clearly defined differences. A new party administration would at least be honest, because it wouldn't know the ropes right at the start."

CITES "MAYOR TROUBLE"

Referring to the current investigation into the municipal affairs of New York City, Broun said:

"I see you have 'mayor trouble' in Pittsburgh. Well, our Mayor Walker is a good fellow—to go on a party with, but I'm a little tired of 'party' government. Any organization can beat any individual, particularly if he is a good fellow."

Broun was introduced by Jane Tait, of the Socialist party, chairman of the meeting.

THREE NERVOUS BANDITS FLEE

City detectives today were without a trace of three young bandits who failed to hold up Spalding Brothers & Co., sporting goods store, 608 Wood street, during the evening rush hour yesterday. The trio fled when five clerks and three customers, whom they had driven into the rear of the storeroom, ran out a door.

While the young bandits were nervously ordering their victims around, Miss Marie Boselvige, 19, of 531 Foreland street, the telephone operator in her office on the second floor was busy calling police. The robbers fled before police arrived. While the robbery was being attempted, a boys' basketball team with a membership of 17 marched into the store and went to the second floor without realizing what was occurring.

When one of the trio flashed a gun in the face of F. S. Rowe, a clerk, Rowe referred him to a firearm expert, believing the man was a customer who wanted the weapon examined.

LONDON SHOWS U. S. HOW TO ERASE VICE

Lord Byng's Relentless Drive Against Gangs Hailed as Example for America

By T. C. WATSON
International News Service.

LONDON, April 11.—"Gang wars" in New York and Chicago are "big news" in London—reports of robbery, murder, graft and all-around thuggery in America serve to convince Britons that "the land of the free and the home of the brave" is just a bit too free and that the brave are the underworld gangs, not the courts of law.

Anton G. Germak, Chicago's new mayor, is being hailed here as "the man who will break Capone's kingdom," and Commissioner Samuel Seabury, of New York, is pictured as the man who will clean up New York. But both of these men have something to shoot at in the record of Lord Byng, of Vimy, who "cleaned up" London's gangs in three months.

LONDON HITS AT VICE

It is only three years ago that the police administration of London was undergoing travail similar to that which has overtaken the New York Police Department. The London shake-ups occurred at just about the time a Philadelphia grand jury was "breaking" a score or more of detectives and policemen for accepting graft.

A London police sergeant had been convicted of accepting more than $175,000 from night club owners and vice-rings, and Lord Byng, then in his sixtieth year, was called in as police dictator. Lord Byng, who returns to Scotland Yard Sunday after a long sick leave, had a brilliant army record.

With all the ruthlessness of a successful army general, in 90 days Lord Byng had rid London of its gangs.

Vice and dope racketeering, then run by foreigners, and the horse and dog-racing tracks, dominated by British gangs, and the helplessly involved police force—that is what the general faced.

BYNG CLEANS UP

Byng set about his task relentlessly, with the result that:

All vice dens and illicit drinking houses (the less-reputable night clubs) have been closed, and the foreign proprietors have been deported:

Gangsters who terrorized the West End of London and almost the entire city were forced to make the race-courses their home.

The police force—especially West End plainclothes men in charge of vice investigations—was purged of all undesirables.

Lord Byng always has said he was able to bring about the reforms so effectively because he was given a free hand and subjected to no political influence.

(A second article on Lord Byng's cleanup of London gangs will appear in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph).

Thieves Give Empty Purse Back to Girl

Miss Betty Miller, of 1001 Carson street, reported to police she was robbed by two men at Fourteenth and Sarah streets early today. They snatched her purse and after removing $6, returned the bag to her, she reported.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that caused the rainfall over this section yesterday is now far down the St. Lawrence valley, and a vast high pressure area covers the interior of the country, with its center over the Mississippi and the Ohio Valley states. The high is producing mostly clear skies between the eastern and western mountain ranges. Another disturbance is developing over the Far West, extending from Alberta southward west of the Rockies. It is producing cloudy weather over that section, but no rainfall except along the Pacific Coast. It is cooler than yesterday over the Ohio Valley states and the lake region and warmer over the western states.

River Conditions.

The upper Allegheny and the upper tributaries of the Monongahela rivers are rising. Stage at Warren is 8.0 feet; Franklin, 6.9; Lock No. 7, 15.9; Pittsburgh, 15.5; Dam No. 4, 12.8; Dam No. 6, 13.6; Dam No. 10, 14.7, and Dam No. 13, 15.2. The Allegheny and the Ohio rivers will rise slowly. About one foot rise expected at the Point by Sunday noon.

ARMY IN LISBON TO BAR REVOLT

LISBON, April 11.—(AP.)—Lisbon awoke today to find itself in the iron grip of the military. During the night heavy details of soldiers were posted in all public squares and elsewhere and today armored cars patrolled the streets.

Theaters were closed and audiences sent home toward the close of performances last night and all cafes and music halls were shut up summarily. Private cars and taxis were halted in the streets by police with rifles, and drivers and occupants forced to show their papers.

Unconfirmed reports said that many persons had been arrested in a new effort to prevent the revolt, which has been successful in Madeira and the Azores, from spreading to the mainland. A blockade was established today in the Azores.

'Breathing Machine' Girl Stands Alone

CHICAGO, April 11.—(AP.)—For the first time since infantile paralysis attacked her early last fall, Miss Frances McGaan stood alone yesterday.

The student nurse who was kept alive four months in a "breathing machine" at St. Luke's Hospital said she was "thrilled" at the event which doctors said marked another milestone in her long path back to health.

BUTTERFLY LEAVES $200 ESTATE

NEW YORK, April 11. (AP.)—The few knickknacks which she left behind in her apartment on the night she was killed, their value not exceeding $200, form the entire estate of Vivian Gordon, a Broadway figure in connection with whose death five men have been arrested.

In the days when things were "breaking" for her, Vivian Gordon was popularly supposed to have accumulated $100,000 through transactions which, police said, included blackmail. Even at the time of her death six weeks ago it was gossipped that she had $75,000.

The shrinkage of her fortunes was revealed when the public administrator appeared in Surrogate Court to ask for letters of administration. She left no real property. Detectives were convinced that she depleted her estate in financing shady financial deals and that her death may have resulted when she demanded a return on the investment.

Harry Stein, a racketeer arrested on suspicion of homicide in the case, and four other men remained in custody today while police continued their search for a sixth man. It was intimated that the man now sought is the one who drove the car from which Miss Gordon's body was thrown into Van Cortlandt Park on the night of February 26.

Attorneys for Stein, threatening habeas corpus proceedings, said he could establish an alibi.

AUTOS KILL 2, INJURE 6

ing the automobile laws. Police said he told them the car was owned by a friend who gave him permission to use it. Police verified this story.

PEDESTRIAN KILLED

A man believed to be Christian Hein, aged 59, address unknown, was killed when hit by an automobile driven, police say, by Attorney Cornelius D. Scully, of 6211 Howe street, in Bigelow boulevard, near Herron avenue. The man apparently became confused while crossing the roadway.

An unidentified woman, aged about 30, was in the Presbyterian Hospital in critical condition from injuries received when struck by an automobile at Western and Allegheny avenues, North Side. She had been unconscious since the accident. Police said Walter J. Hill, 22, of 408 Colton street, Millvale, was drive of the machine.

CYCLIST BADLY HURT

Hurled from his motorcycle when it collided with an automobile in the William Penn Highway, Penn Township, last night, Marshall Elliott, 17, of 307 Bessemer avenue, East Pittsburgh, today was in critical condition in the Braddock General Hospital, with a fractured skull.

Miss Suzanne Connelly, 35, of 826 North Lincoln avenue, North Side, was cut and bruised when hit by an automobile at Galveston and Western avenues early today. She was treated at the Presbyterian Hospital and taken home. Police did not arrest the driver.

Dragged several yards on the bumper of an automobile after they were struck while crossing a street in East Deer Township, Mary Bakos, 18, and a sister, Susie, 13, of Creighton, were in Allegheny Valley Hospital today suffering bruises.

Edward Anthony, 38, Bull Creek, whose machine is alleged to have struck the girls, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

Plan Asks Lower Taxation On Earned Incomes

WASHINGTON, April 11.—(AP.)—A plan which, it is estimated, would save men who earn their money upward of $20,000,000 a year in taxes was before a congressional committee today for consideration.

After an investigation for the joint committee of internal revenue taxation, L. H. Parker reported his belief that increased exemptions on earned income should be given to federal tax payers.

Parker's recommendation, submitted to Chairman Hawley of the committee, said present relief "appears entirely inadequate to provide for the differential in tax between earned income and unearned income which appears proper." He declared:

"The present earned income relief can properly be increased somewhat on incomes up to about $28,000; no additional relief should be given on net incomes between $28,000 and $30,000; on net incomes above $30,000 considerably more relief should be given."

Parker said, however, the report was not prepared with reference to the present depression and "should not be construed as indicating the practicability of adopting any of the suggestions in the immediate future."

He proposed three methods of relief. One would permit deduction of 12½ per cent of the earned net income from income subject to normal and surtaxes. The second would allow a 33 1/3 per cent deduction from income subject to normal tax only; the third would "use a table of constants so designed as to permit of the determination of an earned income tax credit directly from the table as soon as the earned net income has been computed."

Coolidge Cites Benefit Of Training for Blind

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 11.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

On April 13 there will assemble in New York City an international conference for the blind. Over 100 delegates, many of whom are blind, will represent about 35 countries.

Mr. Coolidge

The conference was called by President Hoover at the instance of the American Foundation for the Blind. There are about 5,000,000 blind in the world of which about 114,000 are in the United States.

This movement, now so well organized and embracing almost all the world, is partly humanitarian and partly educational. It has transformed the blind person from ignorance, incapacity and misery into a productive unit of society. Those to whom the world would be forever closed are reclaimed. And almost barren existence becomes economically and intellectually fruitful.

Closely allied are the highly successful efforts in the prevention of blindness. Scores of special schools now exist for educating these afflicted people and through the system of Braille printing, on which the federal government now expends $100,000 annually, more and more literature is available to them. All the problems are not solved, but human brotherhood is making remarkable progress in this field or relief where concrete results are so certain and immediate.

ACTIVITIES DAY HELD AT PITT

Yesterday was activities day at the University of Pittsburgh. The event is given annually by the Women's Self-Government Association.

Girls in each campus activity dramatized in pantomime pageantry their interpretation of a book. The scenes for these living books were laid in Heinz House, which became for the afternoon a veritable old-fashioned book shop, where fiction characters came to life.

An award of $5 will be given to the activity popularly voted to have had the best display. The official judges are Ellen M. Geyer, assistant professor of secondary education; Naomi Ericson, vice president of Women's Student Government Association, and Walter Rome, graduate assistant of student activities.

The committee in charge of the day's program included Anne Kuhar, chairman; Elizabeth Watson and Edith Peterson, in charge of publications; Eugenie Harper and Evelyn Blaisdell, in charge of properties; Claire Cryder, programs, and June Miller, costumes.

Pays for Garters She Stole Long Ago

ROCHESTER, Ind., April 11.—(AP.)—Everybody concerned was happier today about the 10-cent pair of garters a girl stole from Lou Shoemaker, a merchant, 50 years ago. Shoemaker got a letter from a woman in a western state, whose name he did not reveal, announcing that she had stolen the garters from the store he used to run in Kewanna, Ia., and wanted to make amends. She inclosed a dime in payment.

Mrs. Pinchot Speaks In Mercer County

SHARON, Pa., April 11.—Mixing politics with her educational lecture on her sea trip, Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, gave three addresses in Mercer County, stopping at Greenville, Sharon and Grove City. She assailed State Senator Frank Fay of the Mercer-Crawford district for his lining up with anti-Pinchot forces in the election of a chairman.

'New' Bridge Game Old in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia, April 11.—(AP.)—News that auction bridge is losing popularity in the United States in favor of contract has caused amazement in Colombia. What is auction? Colombians ask. Bridge came to this country from France 12 years ago in its contract form and has ousted trecillo as the favorite card game.

Bees in Bonnet Of Gen. Greene Statue

WAYNESBURG, Pa., April 11.—Bees buzzed in the bonnet of Gen. Greene's statue atop the Greene County Court House yesterday, their annual swarming marking official advent of the spring season for many residents here.

Midsummer sunshine proved a lure for the busy insects which annually invade the chapeau of the famed Revolutionary leader, as they made their attack earlier than in past years.

CO-EDS ELECT OFFICERS

Edith Raschen is the new chief executive of the Women's Student Government Association. Claire Cryder, education, '32, is president of the Women's Athletic Association. Mildred Levinson, college '32, is president of Panhellenic Council. The presidency of the Women's Gluee Club goes to Betty Bartley, college '32. Genevieve Blatt, college '33, is president of the Debating Association. Aleeth Roberts, college '32, is president of the Y. W. C. A.

Seeks to Annul Wedding of Son, 17

GREENSBURG, Pa., April 11.—Claiming her minor son, Clyde W. Beighley, 17, of New Kensington, eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va., on April 1, where he married Dorothy Price, 15, Margaret Belle Beighley has filed an annulment petition here.

She claims the couple was married in violation of West Virginia state laws which set the legal age at 18 years.

Woman Real Boss, Wins Mate's Office

STURGEON BAY, Wis., April 11.—(AP.)—Mrs. L. Gunnlaughon is to be boss in name as in fact. She has been elected town treasurer of Washington Island, defeating her husband. Friends wrote her name on the ballot, saying she had done the work anyhow.

Polish Restrictions On Jews Canceled

WARSAW, April 11.—(AP.)—A law canceling the last of old restrictions against Jews in Poland became effective today.

CAFE INQUIRY ON AT PITT

Charges of profiteering in the operation of the University of Pittsburgh cafeteria were to be investigated today by Loman Latta, head of the Student Council investigating committee, in conference with John Weber, business manager of the university.

The charges were denied by Chancellor John G. Bowman yesterday. He declared that it is being "kept alive as a convenience to the students." He said:

"We have about broken even, by struggling along to keep it going. The profits of some years offset the losses of other years. Last month the cafeteria lost $92. The university does not attempt to make a profit—merely to meet expenses, if possible."

Jesse Zizmor, a student, complained that the cafeteria obtained a profit of up to 1,400 per cent on some food items. The Student Council voted to investigate.

Man, 40, Held After Marrying Girl, 11

OMAHA, Neb., April 11.—(AP.)—The marriage last week of an 11-year-old grammar school girl to a man 29 years her senior was under investigation today, while the girl bride lay ill with mumps in a juvenile home. Rosetta Copling is the bride; Albert Bryan, 40, the bridegroom, is in county jail. The girl said the marriage was at her behest.

Leader in G. A. R. Dies in Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 11.—(AP.)—Col. C. D. R. Stowity, 85, Civil War veteran and national quartermaster of the G. A. R. for 24 years, died here last night.

WIFE AWAITING KIDNAPERS

MONROE, Wis., April 11.—(INS.)—The kidnapers of Fred J. Blumer, wealthy brewer, who is being held for $150,000 ransom, will call here today.

That is, if they keep their promise, made Thursday night after they lured the brewer from his home to Rockford, Ill.

If their promise "to call in two days" is kept, authorities hope to discover in what region Blumer is being held. Since his disappearance, search has been under way in Chicago, Freeport and other Illinois cities, but not a single clue has developed.

Mrs. Blumer and her 20-year-old daughter are doubly anxious for the kidnapers to call. They are prepared to barter with them. She made it plain, however, that the demand for $150,000 cannot be met.

Chicago Attorney Feared Kidnaped

CHICAGO, April 11.—(AP.)—The police were searching today for Benjamin McWilliams, a veteran attorney, on the theory that he may have been kidnaped and slain. He has been missing since March 29. One report reaching police was that a close friend of Alphonse Capone had asked him to help search for the missing man.

26-Mile Walk Daily Reported for Farmers

BOSTON, April 11.—(AP.)—Research for the National Association of Chiropodists has determined how far sundry folks walk daily, to wit: Farmers behind a plow, 26 miles; letter carriers, 22; policemen, 14; boys at play, 15; girls, 11½; housekeepers, 8; conductors in trains, 7.

GRAF CHEERED IN HOLY LAND

LONDON, April 11.—(INS.)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin flew low over the central section of Jerusalem today as thousands of residents rushed into the streets and cheered the sky visitor, according to dispatches here.

A mild shower sprinkled down upon the Holy City as the airship sailed over the Mount of Olives and around the Mosque of Omar.

Gliding silently toward Bethlehem, it dipped low over the Church of the Nativity, historical birthplace of Christ, and then swung back toward Cairo. In the latter city it will pick up its commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, before returning to Germany.

Congressman Urges Support for Canal

FRANKLIN, Pa., April 11.—Only tonnage figures, actual and prospective, will convince War Department engineers of the feasibility of a canal connecting the Ohio River and Lake Erie. This is the statement of Congressman Nathan L. Strong, of Brookville, quoted by Secretary Loren D. Schoppe yesterday, in explaining need for manufacturers and all others in the Upper Allegheny Valley to co-operate in the present collection of data by special engineers.

Pheasant Crashes Through Auto Windshield

FRANKLIN, Pa., April 11.—A pheasant crashed against the windshield of an automobile driven by H. S. Gahagan, state highway department engineer, of Franklin, shattering glass and injuring Gahagan about the face. The bird fell dead on the floor of the car. The driver's face was lacerated.

MOTHER SHOT IN BANDIT CHASE

CHICAGO, April 11.—(INS.)—Chicago's "uptown" was restored to normalcy today following the shooting last night by police of a robber suspect and a young mother who was wheeling her 9-month-old baby.

Hundreds of theatergoers scurried to cover as police fired on the suspect, when he broke away from being questioned in connection with a robbery.

The mother, Mrs. Mildred Bingel, was struck on the left leg by a wild bullet. The suspect, Jack La Rue, 21, was shot twice in the stomach. His condition is critical.

TOKIO CABINET MAY RESIGN

TOKIO, April 11.—(INS.)—Resignation of the Japanese cabinet was held imminent today as Premier Yuko Hamaguchi, wounded by an assassin recently and carrying on a stubborn battle for recovery, underwent a third operation.

The ministers, cognizant of the involved political situation growing ever more complex with the prolonged illness of Hamaguchi, were reported in agreement to relinquish their posts tomorrow or within the next few days.

A previous report which asserted that Hamaguchi had resigned was held incorrect.

Meanwhile, political observers predicted that Reijiro Wakatsuki, former premier and head of the Japanese delegation to the London Naval Conference, would become the head of the next Japanese cabinet.

Whisky Revolt Site Is Sought for Park

Residents of Chartiers Valley and South Hills have revived the movement to preserve the site of the first battle of the Whisky Rebellion of July, 1794, as a site for a historic park. A delegation under the leadership of the Chartiers Historical Association will urge the County Commissioners to purchase the 55-acre tract. Plans are for a 40-acre memorial park and a soldiers' cemetery.

American Teacher Acquitted by Turks

ISTAMBUL, Turkey, April 11.—(AP.)—A Turkish judge today acquitted Miss Grace Towner, director of the American School for Girls, of a charge of insulting Turkish nationalism by forcing students to wear American colors, red, white and blue.

The student bringing the charge against her was fined about five cents and costs.

Musician Stricken, Opera Interrupted

NEW YORK, April 11.—(AP.)—The performance of "Siegfried" at the Metropolitan Opera House was briefly interrupted last night when Max Voight, 54, a trumpeter in the orchestra, was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage and fell from his chair. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

Premiere of Two Operas Led by Stokowski

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—(AP.)—Eyes and ears of Philadelphians were treated to unprecedented sights and sounds as Leopold Stokowski led the Philadelphia Orchestra through Igor Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" and Serge Prokofieff's "Les Pas D'Acier," (Dance of the Age of Steel) in their first presentations yesterday on an American stage.

For this extradordinary occasion the Philadelphia Orchestra and the New York League of Composers combined forces, augmented by a numerous array of singers and pantomimists.

At times 15-foot figures appeared mysteriously from deep shadows and moved and gestured high above the stage as protagonists in "Oedipus Rex." While soloists sang the roles the chorus impersonated the populace of ancient Greece, on the stage level, and the orchestra, extending far out into the auditorium, played the instrumental music of Stravinsky's provocative and powerful score.

In sharp contrast to "Oedipus Rex" was Prokofieff's ballet, "Pas D'Acier," which followed, and for which an entirely new scenario was provided by Lee Simonson, who also planned and supervised the staging on three different stage levels. Both in musical material and pictorial and dramatic treatment the two works virtually represented opposite poles.

INTERVIEW PERMITTED BY PRINCE

Here to See Americans, Says Honeymooner; They Won't Make Whoopee in U. S.

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Everybody loves a bridal couple—and New York, the gateway to American hospitality, today began showing a good time to the royal honeymooners from Japan—Prince Takamtsu, younger brother of Emperor Hirohito, and his bride.

The Prince thought he was visiting the United States incognito, or at least without formality. But a heavy guard of police watched over the slumber of the royal party before they arose for a heavy day of festivities.

Crowds waited outside the royal hotel, and a motorcycle escort with sirens primed was ready to lead the imperial entourage at breakneck speed to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, a reception at City Hall, a broadcasting studio, a luncheon and a dinner.

AMAZED AT RECEPTION

The Prince has maintained his oriental facial immobility since the New Yorkese harbor welcome, when he arrived here on the liner Aquitania. But he confided that the noise, the parade up Broadway, the cheering throngs and particularly the energy of American newspaper photographers have been the most amazing phenomena greeting him and his bride since they started on their honeymoon world tour a year ago.

The 21-year-old Princess, who looks like a Japanese print, takes it with more expression. She smiles and glances shyly here and there. Incidentally, she is one of the best-dressed princesses in the royalty business; and she is occidental enough to use a slight touch of powder, rouge and lipstick.

AIDE CARRIES ON

His chief goal in coming to America? He replied:

"To see Americans."

"Hey, stick around, Prince."

A spokesman took over. He was Commander Takeo Yamagata, master of ceremonies to the Emperor. He will see that things are done as rightly as possible through the tour of the royal couple.

Commander Yamagata was asked:

"Does the royal couple dance?"

"They know how but they will not dance here."

The interview proceeded:

"Will they go to a night club?"

"Never. The Princess plays the piano and sings, but I am afraid she will not do so here."

"Does the Princess smoke?"

"Almost not. In Japan it is not the custom much."

"Does she wear a kimona?"

"No, she does not wear a kimona. Sometimes at home she wears her native costume and sometimes she wears European clothes."

"Which does she like the better?"

"I am so sorry but I do not know," the master of ceremonies concluded the interview.

Seek to Substitute Buses for Railway

HARRISBURG, April 11.—(AP.)—The Lehigh Valley Transportation Company has asked the Public Service Commission to permit it to abandon its trolley tracks and service between Greenawalds and the borough of Slatington and between North Catasauqua and Egypt.

Companion petitions were filed by the company's bus subsidiary, the Lehigh Valley Transit Company, for permission to operate buses between these points in lieu of the traction service, one route running from Allentown to Slatington and the other from Allentown to Egypt.

The Beechview Civic League held an open forum meeting last night in Beechwood School. Speakers were District Attorney Andrew T. Park, J. Roland Brady and Attorney Coburn, counsel of the league.

Elopement With 'Count' Regretted by Girl

By CROSWELL BOWEN, JR.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 11.—"Forgive me mother. Please. I am sorry for all the trouble and worry I have caused you. I don't suppose you want me back but from now on I promise to be a good girl."

This was the message pretty 18-year-old Eugenie Jeanne Mourey, who is being questioned by narcotic agents and who arrived two days ago from Berlin, after a hectic romance with a "bogus count," asked International News Service to send to her mother in St. Louis.

"I am sorry it all happened the way it did but I still like Boris even if the police have him in jail in Berlin."

Then one day she met "Count" Boris.

"I liked him very much but did not fall in love with him because he was so much older than I. He was 43."

'BILLY' SUNDAY HERE FOR TWO SUNDAY ADDRESSES

DRYS SPONSOR EVANGELIST'S VISIT

North Side Churches to Unite in Evening Service; Reception Is Arranged

"Billy" Sunday, noted evangelist, will speak at two meetings here tomorrow, under the auspices of the National Anti-Saloon League. He will speak at the morning service of the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, North Highland avenue and Rippey street, and at the evening service of the First United Presbyterian Church, Union avenue, North Side, on "Booze, Foul and Out." Many church of the North Side will unite for the evening service.

Maj. Frank B. Ebbert, field worker of the Anti-Saloon League of America, will take part in the morning service and will deliver a short address on "The Unfinished Battle." Sunday will be met by a reception committee in the church parlors, and the presiding officer will be William A. Kober, president of the board of trustees of the church.

At the evening service in Emory Church, the Rev. Dr. W. W. T. Duncan will speak on "Romance in the Modern World." The services will be in charge of the young people of the church.

Antioch College Head To Speak in East End Church on Law of Economy

President Arthur E. Morgan, of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O., will speak tomorrow morning in the First Unitarian Church, Ellsworth and Morewood avenues, on "The Law of Economy in Experience."

Although not a college graduate himself, Morgan had won considerable acclaim as an engineer before he became president of Antioch in 1920. He was in charge of the $35,000,000 project known as the Miami Conservatory District that was designed to protect Dayton, O., and the surrounding territory from any recurrence of the devastating floods that laid waste to that part of the country in 1913.

In 1920 he was invited to assume the presidency of Antioch College, at which time the student body numbered 50. Within five years he has increased the enrollment to 650, a number to which the student body has been limited. He has established a cooperative plan of work and study at the college which has been used by universities throughout the country.

FIELD OFFICER TO SPEAK HERE SUNDAY

New York Minister to Set Forth 'Call of the West;' Was Former Circuit Rider

The Rev. Frank E. Henry, of New York, N. Y., editorial and field secretary of the National Church Extension Boards of the Congregational and Christian churches, will speak tomorrow morning in the German Evangelical Protestant Church, Smithfield street, on "The Call of the West."

His church extension work began 18 years ago on the dry-farming bench lands of Northeastern Montana. He had been a pastor in Iowa but to regain his health, turned to farming and took up a Montana homestead. He took charge of the church near his home, and later became a circuit pastor.

He was elected missionary superintendent for the northern part of the state of Montana. In 1928 he became vice-president of the Polytechnic Institute at Billings, Mont., and in 1930 took his present position in New York City. Mr. Henry is a graduate of Grinnell College, Ia., and took postgraduate work at Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

RUSSIANS HOLD GOOD FRIDAY

Russian orthodox Catholic churches throughout the land yesterday celebrated Good Friday with special solemn services.

The worshippers in procession marched around the church three times, then knelt and kissed the Winding-Sheet, which contained a painting of Jesus Christ, representing the Saviour in His tomb. The lines formed with the men on the right and the women on the left.

At the St. Peter and Paul Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 2105 Sidney street, South Side, the sepulchre was designed by the Rev. Joseph Hunchak, the pastor. The background was painted by Stanislaw Nezbert, a Russian artist. It represents the cross on Mt. Calvary. On the right it shows the garden where Christ prayed, and on the left, Jerusalem.

Easter will be celebrated starting at midnight tonight, with Resurrection. The worshippers will come to church with baskets filled with meats and bread to be blessed. High mass will be held Sunday morning. The celebration ends Tuesday.

PERSHING'S OFFER 'MAGNIFICENT,' SAYS MARSHAL FOCH

FRENCH LEADER HELD FOE IN CHECK

Describes Hard Fighting On British Front After Closing Breach in Line

Marshal Foch told in yesterday's instalment of the agreement of Doullens, on March 26, 1918, that placed in his hands the unification of the British and French operations on the Western Front. He outlined the immediate steps he took to meet the great German drive that had begun on March 21, and which already had brought serious reverses to the Allied line, particularly to the British 5th Army under Gen. Gough in the vicinity of St. Quentin. In today's instalment, Marshal Foch tells of the steps he took toward halting the German offensive and of Gen. Pershing's offer to throw immediately into the battle line the American divisions available.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH
Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

CHAPTER XIV.

After spending the night in Paris, I left again on the morning of the 27th for the front, still accompanied by Gen. Weymouth and Col. Desticker. Before leaving, however, I wrote a private letter to Gen. Petain, insisting upon the line of action we should follow and asking him to explain its necessity to the French army. It is superfluous to say that, on the part of Gen. Petain, as of all his subordinates, I found the fullest co-operation in framing our resistance along the lines I had indicated, and which still remained to be organized.

I first went to Clermont, the headquarters of Gen. Humbert, commanding the 3rd Army. Here I met Gen. Fayolle. I repeated my instructions, always inspired by the same idea: hold on at all costs, organize our positions, relieve no unit until the first result is achieved.

Marshal Foch

At 12:30 p. m., I left for Dury, to see Gen. Gough. The liaison between the British right and French left seemed to be insecure due to the too hasty retreat of certain elements belonging to the British XVIII Corps. I therefore prescribed new measures to Gen. Mesple, commanding the left units of the French 1st Army and I asked Gen. Gough to personally make sure that the British XVIII corps received my instructions and carried them out.

From there I went to Beauquesne to see Gen. Byng, commanding the British 3rd Army. He explained to me his situation. It did not cause him any anxiety for the moment and he signified his entire agreement with me as to resisting on our present positions, employing for that purpose every means possible.

In the absence of a general reserve—whose intervention might have restored the situation from the very start—the first thing to do was to weld together as rapidly as possible the various fractions of the front that had been broken by the German attack and which had necessarily now become lengthened out.

German Attack Fails

It was essential that all—whether troops in retreat, or reinforcements coming up, and whatever their nationality—cooperate in this task since all idea of relieving any of them was, for the moment, laid aside. If this were not done there could be no hope of stopping the enemy for several days.

On my return to Clermont in the evening, I learned that the Germans had debouched from Roye and, slipping in between the French 1st and 3d Armies, whose junction had not yet been firmly established, had seized Montdidier. Although serious, this unfortunate occurrence was offset by certain favorable events which gave reason to hope that March 27th would mark the culminating point of the crisis, and that the danger which for a week had so seriously threatened the Allies would soon be passed.

The front of the German attack, far from extending, became lessened every day, thanks to the firm stand of the British 3d Army, which, on the north clung fast to Arras, and of the French 3d Army, which on the south, held the wooded heights of Ribecourt-Lassigny. Between these two dikes, the waves of the flood were steadily thinning out and getting more shallow every day.

The British 5th Army was given a new commander, Gen. Rawlinson, an energetic and able soldier who restored its confidence. A large number of men (75,000) were arriving from England. Three British divisions, already recompleted, had replaced fresh divisions in calm sectors and the latter were about to enter the battle.

On March 28th, the enemy's main effort was directed against the Santerre plateau, between the valleys of the Somme and Avre. The terrain was easy to traverse, and the Germans succeeded in gaining ground in the direction of Amiens, forcing back the right of the British 5th Army which was still shaky; moreover, Gen. Debeney had not yet been able to bring up enough troops to support it properly.

Pershing Offers Help

In fact, the deep drive of the enemy towards Montdidier had forced Gen. Debeney to send his first available troops in that direction. These had thrown themselves into the action with great vigor and had even retaken several localities—Nesnil-St. Georges, le Monchel, Assainvilliers.

The fighting, however, was still fierce, and the danger was not entirely past. In order to meet it, the commander of the 1st Army had to postpone the relief of the British forces south of the Somme. For the time being, in any case, the British 5th Army had to remain in line and reorganize on its positions.

But no matter what happened, the resistance along the whole front must be intensified, and I continued to impress upon everybody that there must be no exceptions to this inflexible principle. In obedience to it, Gen. Gough, who had contemplated moving his headquarters further back, remained where he was.

Meanwhile, the concentration of French reserves went on in the Beauvais region. In order to provide for their organization and command, Gen. Petain had already withdrawn the staff of the 5th Army from the Champagne front, and, at a meeting held at Clermont on the afternoon of the 28th between Gen. Petain, Monsieur Clemenceau, Monsieur Loucheur and myself, it was also decided to recall the staff of the 10th Army from Italy.

A few hours before this meeting, Gen. Pershing had come to see me and, with magnificent spirit, spontaneously offered to throw immediately into the battle all the instructed American divisions.

Gen. Bliss, the American representative on the Versailles committee, animated by a similar sentiment, came to me saying:

"We are here to get ourselves killed; if you want to use us, what are you waiting for?"

Situation Improves

On March 29 the German attacks grew still more restricted, embracing as they did only that part of the front between Montdidier and the Amiens-Peronne road. Although they failed almost entirely in the Montdidier region and only gained a little ground northwest of the town, they made a more appreciable advance between the Avre and the Amiens-Peronne road, where the British right wing and Gen. Mesple's detachment were forced back to the line Marselcave - Villerssur - Erables.

In spite of this retirement, the situation of the Allies continued to improve.

Field Marshal Haig was thus enabled to reconstitute his reserves and thereby to reorganize his 5th Army without withdrawing it from the line. We had a conversation at Abbeville as to the vital importance of this last point; as a result Gen. Rawlinson was instructed to maintain his front south of the Somme at all costs, which, in view of its reduced length, should not present any difficulty.

On the evening of the 29th I established my headquarters at Beauvais, where Gen. Fayolle's headquarters had been functioning since morning and where Gen. Petain himself established a command post four days later.

Since March 26 I had been attending to the most pressing needs, going from place to place, visiting the various headquarters and laying down for all the immediate course of action which seemed essential for reconstructing the broken front; but now that a systematic organization existed which could be counted upon to direct the resistance of the Allied forces, the time had come to lay down the general rules by which our battle should be conducted.

Attacks Intensified

With this end in view, I forwarded to the commanders-in-chief general instructions which constituted a summary of the detailed directions I had given since March 26. The essential object to which the combined efforts of all were to be addressed remained "a close liaison between the British and French armies, to be assured especially by keeping possession of Amiens and then by regaining the unhampered use of that center."

This object was to be pursued, first, by holding and organizing a strong defensive front on our present positions; second, by the formation, north of Amiens for the British forces and northwest of Beauvais for the French forces, of strong reserves destined to counter an enemy attack, or undertake an offensive.

In order to form this massed maneuver as rapidly and in as great strength as possible, fronts not under attack should be unhesitatingly drawn upon.

But at the moment this instruction reached its destinations the enemy had begun to redouble his efforts. On March 30 he resumed and extended his attacks on both sides of Montdidier between the Amiens-Petonne highway and Lassigny. He was thus starting a second battle before we had become firmly established on our positions.

On the following day, March 31, he renewed his attacks, but he was nailed to his place by the resistance and counterattacks of the Allies, and he was only able to mark a slight advance in the bend of the Luce, between Moreuil and Marcelcave. This, it is true, threatened a particularly sensitive point in the direction of Amiens itself, where the Franco-British liaison was as yet by no means secure.

Liaison Maintained

The situation was met by sending the British 5th Army enough reinforcements to make sure of its holding fast on the positions it occupied, and, in addition, the French 1st Army extended its front up to Hangard.

The battle of Montdidier-Amiens appeared to be coming to a close. On the evening of April 1 it was possible to write to the Prime Minister:

"The enemy's initiative seems now blocked and paralyzed."

But, as a matter of fact, after a short respite, the Germans on April 4 again delivered violent attacks on the British 4th Army (Marshal Haig had decided that the 5th Army, reorganized under the command of Gen. Rawlinson, should be called the 4th Army) and the French 1st Army between the Somme and Montdidier.

The center of the British 4th Army was forced back on Villers-Bretonneaux, and the French 1st Army, on its part, was driven in for a considerable distance on the Rouvrel plateau. This loss was partly retrieved by counter-attacks carried out on the following day, April 5th.

But, the fact of vital importance was that the liaison between the two armies in the region of Hangard had been firmly maintained and in order to definitely assure it, Gen. Rawlinson was requested to employ all available reserves and artillery to support the French left.

In order to emphasize our determination not to give ground, I asked Marshal Haig to suggest to Gen. Rawlinson that he do not move his headquarters further back, as he had signified his intention of doing.

Enemy Efforts Fail

In the course of this day Clemenceau, Loucheu, Winston Churchill, and finally the President of the Republic, all came to see me at Beauvais. This gives some measure of the anxiety which reigned among the Allied governments.

From this time on, the Germans could no longer expect important results from the battle. In the face of the increased strength presented by the Allies, their attacks became more and more difficult and costly, and they finally found themselves forced to stop them without having been able to achieve the strategic results aimed at. The French Army had not been separated from the British Army.

In order to finish on a note of easy success, the Germans, on April 6, undertook the capture of the strip of ground occupied by the French Sixth Army to the west of St. Gobain forest, between the Oise and the Ailette Canal.

This action on the part of the enemy, however, had been so clearly foreseen that the Sixth Army, which was here very far advanced, had only maintained weak outposts north of the canal. The German attack encountered merely scattered elements which withdrew fighting. Nevertheless, the attack was made with great caution and took four days to reach the Ailette (April 5th-9th).

Pershing Offers Yankees

In the midst of the crisis that threatened the Allied cause in the face of the great 1918 German drive Gen. Pershing met Gen. Foch at Clermont on March 28, 1918, and offered to throw into battle immediately all the American troops then available in France. Foch refers to this meeting in the accompanying instalment. What Gen. Pershing told Foch on that historic occasion follows:

"I have come to say to you that the American people would hold it a great honor for our troops were they engaged in the present battle. I ask it of you in my name and in that of the American people. There is at this moment no other question than that of fighting. Infantry, artillery, aviation—all that we have—are yours to dispose of as you will. Others are coming who will be as numerous as may be necessary. I have come to say to you that the American people would be proud to be engaged in the greatest battle of history."

Made Pledge

GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING

Gen. Pershing, whose offer of all available U. S. troops to meet the emergency in the spring of 1918 is recorded here today by Marshal Foch. Bliss reiterated Pershing's pledge.

JOB FUND DRIVE TOTAL NEAR $1,000,000

One-Third of Necessary Sum Obtained; Donations Yesterday Set High Mark

Solicitors for the Allegheny County Emergency Association's drive to obtain $3,000,000 to insure the success of the Pittsburgh Plan for the stabilization of employment, today began the sixth day of their campaign. No report luncheon was to be held today.

Contributions received today and tomorrow will be audited by the senior class of the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy Monday between 11:30 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. at the Chamber of Commerce.

The total of contributions yesterday was $85,468.46, the largest daily sum reported since the opening of the campaign last Monday, bringing the amount of the fund up to $962,484.45. Of yesterday's sum, $75,000 was contributed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. The company also gave $25,000 before the opening of the drive.

Division "B," composed of 300 members of the Chamber of Commerce under the chairmanship of T. P. Gaylord, covering corporations and employes, reported $80,599.36 yesterday; Division "A," the unit in charge of individual solicitation under Walter C. Carroll, reported $4,869.10.

There remains $2,037,515.55 to be contributed before the goal of $3,000,000 is attained. Officials of the association have stated that this amount is necessary if the plan to put jobless men to work on public projects is to be a success. For every dollar spent by the association, officials say, from $1.60 to $1.80 is put into circulation. There are many public projects in the district to be begun, as soon as the funds for labor are obtained.

In a statement issued yesterday by the association, officials declared that to date, 2,500 persons have been given employment, but that several thousand additional unemployed have applied for work.

Meyer Girls In Bridal Party

Such a glorious day for a wedding! And, of course, there are marriages of note taking place in the East which are of interest here.

At a wedding taking place today in Washington, Mathilda and Dorothy Meyer, daughters of the William Meyers, of Shady avenue, are members of the bridal party. The bride is Senorita Lucia Esperanza Tessada-Guzman, and the bridegroom, James Willett, of Washington.

Mathilda and Dorothy, who is a student at Forrest Glenn, have just returned from Miami Beach with their father and mother.

I want to tell you about some folks who are coming home. The junior William Larimer Joneses and the J. L. Dawson Painters are expected home tomorrow night from Palm Springs, Cal. Next week the Winfield K. Shirases will return from Ormond Beach, and Mrs. Remsen Van Messler, of Pembroke place, from Summerville, S. C.

Returning Home

Later in the month Mrs. Franklin C. Irish, her daughter, Lydia, and Sylvia Robertson will return from Europe; the G. Harton Singers and their children, Peggy and G. H. Singer III, will return from Palm Springs, and Mrs. Harvey Childs III will return from California.

* * *

Spring never fails to bring travelers home, for a time, at least, before they start off on new journeys. The J. Frank Kiers, of Beechwood boulevard, have returned from Paris, and the Howard C. Heinzes, who have been wintering in Bermuda, return today to their home in Morewood Heights. They were joined in Bermuda at Easter time by their son, Rust Heinz, and his classmate at Choate, Worthington Johnson. Mrs. William Terrell Johnson, who accompanied the boys to Bermuda, returned earlier in the week.

Travel Chatter

Laura Evans and her mother, Mrs. Howard S. Evans, will return home within a few days, and dock in New York today. They have been on the continent. Today the J. Frank Drakes and their daughter, Virginia, of Pembroke place, arrive home after a fortnight at Hot Springs, Va., following extensive travels during the winter. Another daughter, Constance, who was at the resort with them, will return to Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn. Home from Pinehurst, N. C., are Mrs. Albert Curry and her daughter, Dorothy, who is a student at Rosemary Hall.

Mrs. Rose Auth, of Kincaid street, East End, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Virginia T. Auth, to Lawrence E. McFarland, son of Mrs. Agnes McFarland, of Kentucky avenue, East End, which took place in St. Lawrence Church, on Wednesday, at 9 o'clock in the morning. The Rev. P. H. Callery officiated. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mabel Auth, and James McFarland was his brother's best man. The wedding breakfast was served in Webster Hall. After an Eastern wedding trip, Mr. McFarland and his bride, will make their home in the East End.

Announce Marriage

* * *

Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock, Miss Lois Barry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Barry, of Maripoe street, became the bride of Frank M. Lynch, in St. Paul's Cathedral.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of coral lace, with which she wore a hat of brown silk braid, and carried spring flowers. Her only attendant was Dr. Margaret Ledden, who wore a gown of yellow silk net with a matching hat, and carried spring flowers. Mrs. Barry wore beige chiffon with a matching hat. Serving as best man was James Vaughn, and the ushers were Edward Lynch, brother of the bridegroom, and Dr. Daniel Ledden.

There was a wedding breakfast and reception in the home of the bride for 75 guests. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch left for a motor trip to Canada, and will make their home in Maripoe street, after May 1. The bride is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and a member of Theta Pi Alpha.

Girls Are Flying Higher

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Well, Elinor, it ain't bad looking from the ground.

Miss Smith's sky scampering tops Ruth Nichols by a vertical mile. Ruth got up about five miles and then came back for her toothbrush or something.

Those girls have plenty of nerve. Not that we would be afraid to go up that far. Only it seems like putting too much emphasis on sport.

You know it affects some people. While Elinor was feathering around six miles in the air, her chaperon was screaming on the back porch.

Competition among prominent men to see who can make the longest trip.

Mayor of Grabstown is now in China where laundry checks come true. The president of our bank is touring the world on a two-family surf board and our broker is in Guatemala digging himself a sea level canal.

We said once before that when your doctor advises you to travel for your health you don't have to go. But when your lawyer says the same thing you'd better grab your foot in your hand and make some swift hen tracks.

We envy the boys who can hop the boat when things start getting looser than feathers in a pillow fight. Just slap the desktop down, grab the nearest hat and you're off to Philadelphia in the morning.

Most of us are forced to stay with the eggs in the home nest and when the doorbell rings we walk slow and think fast. When you are talking with your landlord he is the station announcer. When the grocer sticks out his hand he doesn't want you to read his palm. The milkman, the baker and the butcher make a nice radio trio if you like a daily broadcast.

You've got to face it because you are one of the hooey polloi. Which means people in the least common denominator. But when the bills start rolling in on the big boys they hop on their bicycles and go away from there.

It's the voice with the smile that makes you cry. Don't think the sixteenth vice president is taking it on the lam. Nope, he's simply off on a short meridian stroll past a couple of frontiers.

When things get too tough distance will soften them up. That personal contact stuff with clients is great until you try to reverse the contact. Then the sixteenth vice-president packs a brief case, whistles to his stenographer, and hangs an "out to lunch" sign on the doorknob. He's out to lunch. But there should be a postscript saying that he likes foreign cooking.

Some day we are going to catch one of those affable birds in town. And we will guarantee he will stay there until a gargoyle wins a beauty prize.

In the meantime, we think we'll take a trip ourselves.

FINE HANDWORK DENOTES ORIGINALITY IN FROCKS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 11.—The hand that handles needle and thread this season is of supreme importance here. For it has been many seasons since fine handwork has been so glorified, so that the most expensive frocks rely entirely on fine handwork for their trimming and distinction. A frock of this type cannot be copied, it is the one assurance of originality left to harassed designers and indignant clients who pay vast sums, only to see their frocks duplicated almost before they are worn.

* * *

BUT THE FROCK distinguished by fine handwork need not bother about originality of design or detail, the needlework is enough to set it apart from its fellows. There is an engaging charm about the dress distinguished by this detail and its simplicity coupled with its distinction makes it wearable for almost every type of daytime occasion. And when this is true of a dress, it means that one has a rare model, and one that will give long and useful service, repaying its original cost.

* * *

THE RECENT PREMET collection was distinguished by an enormous amount of handwork, of which the dress sketched here is a noteworthy example. It is of black crepe de chine and shows a multitude of fine pintucking, all hand done. In addition, there are edgings formed of flat, small flowers, cut out of the crepe and attached to the dress by means of hand embroidered centers. The blouse forms a belted tunic and the whole model forms a very good idea of the dress that most of us have been longing for.

* * *

THE DARK DRESS enlivened with white touches is a favorite of many designers, and of Patou in particular. It is a theme on which he elaborates, as will be seen from a glance at the sketch, which shows one such very new model.

* * *

THE DRESS is black crepe Sokol and it has a double jabot of white pique and narrow white lace edging the neckline and forming the frilled, lower part of the sleeves. The skirt has elaborate piecings fitted closely over the hips, even as low as to the knee, where a circular flare starts.

Prominent Woman Church Worker Dies

PALM BEACH, Fla., April 11.—(AP.)—Miss Florence A. Yarrow, widely known in religious circles for her years of missionary work in the United States and Hawaii, died at her home here Thursday, after a long illness.

Born in England, Miss Yarrow was graduated from the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, and spent most of her life in church work. She was a Presbyterian. A sister, Mrs. J. M. Mathews, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and six brothers, survive her.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

Spring is here . . . Yes, it is . . . The little boys are bringing their wagons up from the cellar . . . Kids are shooting marbles . . . Young husbands tote rose bushes home . . Office workers are lethargic . . . Creatures who write columns yell louder for paragraphs . . . Sunday drivers get out the road maps and tourists get out the tents . . . And college freshmen write themes entitled "Spring," in which they tell about the trees sprucing up and the grass slowly changing to green . . . Ah, yes, spring is here and paragraphs are there . . .

Portrait of a man talking to himself: Why not write a column called "Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself?" . . . That guy Winchell writes it . . . Well, how about one called man about town? . . . He writes that, too . . . How about letting the secretary write one? . . . Sure, go get yourself a secretary . . . Tell about those two fellows that met over the Pershing memoirs . . . There was a slight mistake in one of the instalments, so a soldier from Oakmont, who was an officer overseas, wrote in to the paper, and his correction was published . . . And one of his overseas pals who hadn't seen him since they left the Army saw the letter and hunted him up . . . And they celebrated the reunion.

And oh, yes, there's that church lady . . . The height of respectability . . . She wanted a new apartment, so she went over to the North Side and the landlady showed her around . . . The landlady was very courteous, and the apartment was nice . . . And the lady was set to sign the lease when she found out the landlady was the woman that Jim Clark, the Public Safety Director, promised to toss into the Allegheny River a half-dozen years ago . . . He never did, though . . . Well, then, how about George Ludlow's story of the boaster who boasted he had found not a pearl in an oyster, but a whole necklace in a lobster? . . . No . . .

* * *

Newspapermen? Newspapermen don't drink . . . That is, more of them don't than do, but you can't sell that to the skeptics . . . The proportion of newspapermen who drink is about the same as in any other office . . . excepting, of course, the Anti-Saloon League offices . . . And that includes the reporter on one of the defunct papers, who, when Petey Davidson wouldn't let him in the Little Paris some years ago because the joint was playing to capacity, got Pete Walsh, the boss policeman, out of bed to raid the place . . . Joint? Don't use the word joint . . . It has a bad sound . . . Use establishment . . . or cafe . . .

* * *

And Anne Caldwell? Where has Anne got to, with that fifty thousand she won in the heart balm suit a few years ago? . . . And wasn't it outrageous the way those reporters used to sit there and say that Anne went into her tears just before every edition went to press . . . She didn't miss a single edition, they'd say, and they shouldn't have said it because Anne was all wright, wasn't she?

* * *

Speaking of Westinghouse, its engineers were co-operating with General Electric's on some invention . . . And the engineers battled so that a couple of the companies' vice presidents had to get together and settle the matter . . . And here's one for the electrical trade: Each of the Pennsy's new locomotives has four motors, each of which requires 9,000 cubic feet of air per minute to cool it . . . And the Liberty Tubes, together, each minute require less . . . Think of it! . . . You think of it! . . .

* * *

And that Pennsy clock face ain't washed yet . . . What's the idea, you big stiff, Pennsylvania Railroad?

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SAN JOSE, April 11.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Flew in here by Pan-American. We was wakened exactly at the same time yesterday morning by another little shake in Managua. Now I am a prophet among the Marines, as I said they would use them for reveille. Today this beautiful little country celebrates a national victory over the United States. Now I know how an Englishman feels in our country on the Fourth of July.

Will Rogers

Our calamities come in bunches. Now Nick is dead, Washington won't seem the same to me. I used to go straight for his office and make it my headquarters at the Capitol all day. We would get Jack Garner (who loved Nick) and then I would, between the two, get the real "lowdown" on what the government wasn't doing. I have been told many times by many Democrats that he was the most able and most popular man in Congress. Why is it a bum politician never dies?

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

Studio Buys Tarkington's 'Plutocrat' as Yarn For Will Rogers

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, April 11.

Stars like Will Rogers, whose scope is limited, cause studios to spend many weary hours searching for stories.

Remembering the success of "They Had to See Paris," Fox has just bought Booth Tarkington's "The Plutocrat" for their acting columnist. It is the story of a middle-class American family who come into sudden money and go to Algiers to spend part of it.

Will Rogers

It is planned for the star to start "The Plutocrat" on the conclusion of his goodwill flight to South America. David Butler, who did "A Connecticut Yankee," will direct and William Conselman again will write the screen play and the dialogue.

NEED FOR A SOLOMON

When the talk turns to unhappy predicaments, John Hall recalls the story of the Hollywood couple who were getting a divorce. Everything went all right until it came to the community property. All they had was a couple of love birds and they couldn't part them.

SNAPPY COMEBACK

Then there's Jim Keefe's story about the Hollywood writer who expounded a gag during a story conference. As he finished, one of the listeners edged to the door.

"I'm going to lift that one from you," he fired a parting shot.

LATEST GOSSIP

In a recent speech, William DeMille voiced the heresy that when one writer does a story, he should receive billing above the director. Guess where the speech was made?—at the Writer's Club—Harold Lloyd was sitting in the studio playing backgammon when newsboys cried under his windows, "Movie Star Stricken! Harold Lloyd no more!"—The comedian is to undergo Hollywood's favorite operation—out with the appendix . . . When Ann Harding and Harry Bannister fly back East, Ann will stop off in Philadelphia to see Jasper Deeter, conductor of a little theater. It was Deeter who discovered the Pathe star when he was connected with the Provinceton Players. "And I still can take lessons from him," says grateful Ann . . . Directors Irving Cummings is back from New York where he had an inch and a half of his jaw-bone removed . . . Many of the lots at the famous Malibu Beach film colony are only 30 feet wide. The newest bid for privacy is to have windows only in the front and back of the houses . . . Constance Bennett plans to have a house only a few doors away from sister, Joan. Constance's adopted son and Joan's three-year-old daughter will be able to play together.

Harold Lloyd

THE TEMPTER

I can't vouch for its truth, but the story goes that a film producer promised David Warfield

"If you'll come to Hollywood I'll make you as famous as Gary Cooper."

MORE ABOUT JOAN

Rehearsing at Joan Bennett's Malibu Beach house this noon were Owen Moore and several of the company of "Hush Money." Moore plays a gangster, who represents Joan's "past." The hero will be Hardy Albright, a newcomer from Broadway or thereabouts. Rita Le Roy will do her home-breaking act in the film. Sidney Lanfield directs.

'SKIPPY'S' LAST DAY IN FULTON, SHERIDAN

This is the last day for "Skippy" in the Fulton and Sheridan Square theaters, the engagement having been extended two days in each house. Photoplay patrons who like good clean films, suitable for the entire family, have reason to be grateful for the two extra days, for "Skippy" is one of the most enjoyable comedies ever to come to the screen, with plenty of fun and a shade of pathos and depth of feeling that makes it most human. Jackie Cooper, Little Robert Coogan, Mitzi Green and Jackie Searl are the prominent kiddies. Enid Bennett, star of other days, plays Skippy's mother.

Legion to Honor Vanderbilt Man

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., April 11.—A distinguished service certificate will be presented by Emery Lewis Pratt Post, American Legion, of Vanderbilt, to Curte C. Collins, of that place, on April 16, citing him for meritorious service to his community.

Workman Injured In Stone Plant

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., April 11.—Joseph Graf, 36, sustained internal injuries at the Casparis plant of the Youghiogheny Crushed Stone Company when an incline car ran over him. He is in Connellsville Hospital.

Plays, Players and By-Play

James Cowl's Viola, in "Twelfth Night," in which she will be seen for a week in the Alvin, beginning Monday, is her third Shakespearean role. Previously she has mooned as Juliet and starred as Cleopatra.

Gas, just common gas, which is called petrol once you cross an ocean or two, costs $1.25 per gallon in the hinterlands of Africa, according to Harry Carey, who is featured in "Trader Horn," fillum which begins a second week in the Nixon Monday. Harry weeps probably because he was a buyer instead of a seller.

A number of organizations have taken large blocks of seats for various nights in the Pitt next week, when "Death Takes a Holiday" will be repeated by the George Sharp Players. This is sorta getting orders from orders.

In the matter of photographs players are prone to favor full length portraits although the work of some of them would indicate a bust as the more appropriate.

BESTOR ORCHESTRA, NAGEL IN ENRIGHT

Don Bestor and his orchestra feature the new stage bill, which opened yesterday in the Enright. The show is entitled "Puttin' on the Dog." Prominent among the entertainers are Alfred Latell and his dog, Bonzo; Dave and Joe O'Gorman and Babe Kane. Again Brian McDonald looks after the master of ceremony antics.

The photoplay is "Bad Sister," an adaptation of a Booth Tarkington story. It concerns two sisters, one modest and good, and the other, a flirt and not so good. The locale is a small town. Conrad Nagel, Sidney Fox (she's a girl), Bette Davis, Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville are in the cast.

Husband Cleared In Crash Killing?

NEW CASTLE, Pa., April 11.—A coroner's jury, investigating the accident on the New Wilmington-New Castle highway, on March 15, in which Mrs. Anna Waddell Stevenson, of Bellevue, and Mrs. Mary Rutherford, of Lancaster, O., were killed, returned a verdict exonerating Clarence Stevenson, husband of one of the women and driver of the car.

NORMA SHEARER GOES TO SOME PARTIES IN THE PENN

By GEORGE SEIBEL

It must have been a hot afternoon in Hollywood, and the Homers who were putting together a scenario for Norma Shearer nodded. The result, seen at the Penn, is called "Strangers May Kiss." Norma and Nefl Hamilton start kissing in an airplane and just escape annihilation. The remainder of their doings are about as sensible.

George Seibel

But they go to parties, and so does Robert Montgomery, who is the other man in the picture. Every time Norma refuses to marry Robert, he goes and takes another drink. Taking drinks and going to parties—sometimes to a football game—is all these people have to do. After they have gone to enough parties in America, they start week-ending in Paris.

Every time the scenario Homers could think of nothing, they staged another party. Which gives all the people a chance to wear all their clothes and take some more drinks.

THE GRAND CLIMAX

One woman jumps out of the window of a hotel because she caught her husband at a party with another woman. So the heroine, played by Norma, is firmly convinced that marriage is a failure.

Just the same she goes to Mexico with her adorer, and when he gets a hurry call to Brazil she starts for Paris and more parties. The other man also goes to Paris and takes some more drinks.

There are many wisecracks in the dialogue, but the one that got the most laughter was "Here's mud in your eye!" Even on hot afternoons in Hollywood they think of clever things.

Well, Norma Shearer isn't hard to look at and she does wear some very fetching gowns—some of which even have backs.

TED CLAIRE AGAIN

That very clever Pittsburgh girl, Martha Bonini, does some dancing that is the feature of the stage program, presided over by jolly Ted Claire. Jack Powell with his drumsticks furnishes a concert in a kitchen with highly amusing effects. And there is a real Bear that skates and rides the bicycle as gracefully as if he were trained by Chester Hale.

The Chester Hale Girls also wear skates this week, and go rolling along merrily through their numbers. Robert Conche directing the orchestra plays a cello solo with feeling, and organist Dick Leibert has everybody singing.

The news reel brings a few moments of rare comedy when two monkeys find an alarm clock which goes off. There ought to be an alarm clock in the scenario department when the next picture is made for Norma Shearer.

Kennywood to Open New Season Sunday

With two concerts, afternoon and evening, by Danny Nirella's Band, Kennywood Park will inaugurate its thirty-third season tomorrow. Regular Saturday night dancing will start April 18 in the pavilion, with the popular Kennywoodians, under the direction of Danny Kelly, again furnishing music. All of the old favorite amusement and recreational devices will be in operation tomorrow. Thirty-three candles will shine brightly on a cake, 10 feet in diameter by five feet high, symbolizing the park's birthday. The regular daily picnic season will be given May 15.

Man About Town

Another First-Night: "Peter Ibbetson" revived and revised at the Shubert . . . Robert Benchley reminisces . . . In 1917 he was the attraction's exploiter . . . In that scene where Peter slumbers and dreams on the lounge, a scent is struck in the background—and he dreams of his playmate Mimsey and his kin . . . The lights go black, permitting Peter to be replaced on the lounge by a substitute, so that he may also act in the dream episode . . . In 1917 John Barrymore had the assignment now given to Dennis King . . . The opening performance at the time was choked with horrible happenings . . . There was Barrymore "dreaming" on the lounge and the electrician in the wings was also asleep . . . Barrymore became incensed when his patience melted, so he dashed off stage and punched the stage-hand full on the Durante . . . By some queer coincidence in the next act nearly all the scenery fell on Barrymore.

At the 1931 premiere of the revival, the ghost of Du Maurier, from whose novel the touching and romantic tale was dramatized, asserted itself . . . Surely it could not have objected to the sterling performances by the players or by the revisions made by Constance Collier! . . . However, Charles Coburn, as Col. Ibbetson, is supposed to be felled by his angry son, Peter . . . There is a fierce quarrel and in 1917, when Barrymore wielded the cane on his kin's head, the stick was built so it would break in two . . . Even then it was an effective scene . . . But the other night Dennis King walloped Mr. Coburn a mighty pair of whacks right on the head and nearly broke it instead of the cane . . . Mr. Coburn sustained a deep wound.

The First-Night before the arrival of "Ibbetson" was enlivened by a chap who dashed from this aisle to that one and from critic to critic urging them to be sure and mention an actor in the cast whose name, ironically enough, was conspicuous in the next day's reviews by its omission . . . There was no other excitement except when George Jean Nathan yawned so boisterously it disturbed the nap of C. P. Greneker, the renowned press agent.

Vignette: The white pretty-pretty and her Jap escort at the Rialto witnessing the Doug Fairbanks flicker "Reaching for the Moon" . . . And between giggles she translates the French repartee for him . . . The physicians discussing the recent orb operation in Pennsylvania, and the youth who was cured of blindness . . . The doctors tittering at the newspapers because they "over-played" the story, contending that similar operations take place almost daily in New York—and just as successfully—and that it is considered "unethical" for any doctor to "advertise" his triumphs in the press . . . Nearly every one you meet now tells you that he was almost in the plane that killed Rockne.

The first "smash success of the year," you hear them say, will be Max Gordon's "Band Wagon" show, now in the suburbs . . . Mr. Gordon provided "Three's a Crowd" . . . Capt. Frank Hawks at the Lambs Gambol, the only really famous member of the crowd, tells the actors in a sincere speech: "Gee! I never thought that some day I would be sitting among so many famous people. I am so thrilled" . . . And he meant it . . . When the elder Cato was asked why he had no statue erected in his memory, he answered: "I had much rather men should ask me why I had no statue, than why I had one."

F. Ziegfeld and Gene Buck plotting the next "Follies" over a table at Dinty Moore's . . . A musical comedy star just back from Hollywood where he made a talkie, hands the uniformed barker of a movie house $5 and urges him to omit calling out his name in his sidewalk announcements . . . Because he had read the reviews on the flop and wanted to keep his connection with the flicker a secret . . . "Three Little Words," one of the better known songs, will bring the lyricist and composer not more than six or seven grand . . . Before radio became a household pet, it is argued, the same number would have earned for them at least 50, including, of course, the mechanical royalties . . . Jed Harris, they say, paid Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur a handsome advance fee to write a play about Morris Gest . . . So they are writing it about Jed Harris.

The "tricky" question that stumps all fire department applicants has its sequel in the police examination . . . The query that sticks 'em is: "What has the right-of-way—a mail truck, a fire truck, a police wagon or an ambulance?" . . . The wrong and usual answer is "fire truck" . . . The correct reply, "Mailtruck" . . . Vanity Fair next will nominate for oblivion—Belle Livingston, Isadora Duncan's brother Raymond, Magistrate Jean Norris, Morris Sheppard, father of the Eighteenth Amendment, and Lou Tellegen . . . Hazel Forbes cables Mr. Ziegfeld that she isn't a bride yet . . . Harold Ross, the Nyorker editor, sits in one of the Childs restaurants and reads Mae West's "The Contant Sinner" . . . Ask him about the last three chapters . . . An "Italian Count and Countess" are being entertained lavishly around Park avenue . . . When they were married in 1927, they were Greeks—and dwelled at the Algonquin Hotel for about a year . . . Then they disappeared to turn up now in the Italian and royal manner and they are getting away with it . . . New York is like that.

Walter Donaldson, the composer of "You're Driving Me Crazy" and Chevalier's next ditty, "Lucille," explains why you invariably see him with two girls . . . "You have to be attentive to one girl," he says, "but when you have two with you, and you get tired of amusing them—you let them bore each other" . . . The very funny Burns and Allen act which closes a week's engagement at the Palace tonight . . . During most of their act a piano accompanist patiently sits at his piano waiting for a music cue . . . Finally the orchestra strikes up a tune and Burns and Allen sing it . . . "Hold on, there!" cries the accompanist, "that's not the music!" . . . "What do you mean it isn't?" ask the pair. "We ought to know. It's our music." . . . "But aren't you people Brown and Williams?" says the fellow . . . "No," is the reply, "we are Burns and Allen!" . . . "My gosh!" is the hysterical fellow's answer: "Isn't this Loew's State?" and out he flies.

At the Villa-Royale, Babcock boulevard, Sammy Walsh will inaugurate the summer season tonight, appearing as master of ceremonies. In the show will be Jack Pettis and his recording orchestra.

STANLEY HAS CHANCE WEEK SO WE DRINK SOME COFFEE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Take - a - Chance Week," which looks like a movement to shut the critics' mouths, is holding forth in the Stanley. The management wants the show to be in the nature of a surprise and so what can a poor reviewer do? Nothing, except go up to the mezzanine floor and drink some free coffee. And that's just what we did.

As we sat sipping the coffee we saw Pearl wander by. Pearl used to be a waitress. And she was a smart kid. When anyone "wisecracked" to her, she always answered that country girls may be innocent in the movies, but they knew something where she came from.

Nowadays, though, you don't find innocent movie heroines. They all seem to go in for the sophisticated stuff. Why, even Elinor Glyn's heroines have become old-fashioned.

We saw a fellow we knew. He paused to say hello and we asked him how he liked the picture. But the management wouldn't like us if we'd tell you what he said. This fellow talks about Shanghai, city of two souls; Singapore and Malay sailing vessels, the Shakespeare country and about the rugged Algerian coast, as if they lay in his backyard. But he once told us he had never been east of Cresson or west of Steubenville and that his life-long ambition is to see Niagara Falls.

Oh, well, all the drammer isn't in the movies.

We put on our hat and sauntered out of the theater, to the accompaniment of back-stage hammering, which, the master of ceremonies said was Johnny Harris putting his stamp of approval on the show. And this time you'll have to take Mr. Harris' word for it.

MARY PICKFORD DOES SLAPSTICK KIKI IN ALDINE

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Kiki," the old Belasco stage play, which has been done in the movies before, has been turned into a slapstick exhibition in the Mary Pickford version, current in the Aldine. However, it has plenty of laughs.

Miss Pickford puts a lot of pep into the title role, which she does with a roguish gesture. However, there are some tell-tale camera closeups, making you remember that this is Mary Pickford before you. A Mary Pickford who has been graduated by collecting years from such romping parts.

The actress is called upon to effect a French accent, which she effects too effectively at times.

The story, as many will recall, concerns a chorus girl, who vies for a man's love with said man's ex-wife. Reginald Denny gives a nice performance of the man.

Miss Pickford seems to enjoy her part. She ruins a show, slaps Mr. Denny's face and has a grand time chasing a butler all over the place.

SINGLE FIRM SERVES ALL NEEDS

McCloy's Have Department Store for Business With Wide Range of Products

Pittsburgh has a department store of business. Practically every office need can be supplied in the building occupied by McCloy's at 642 Liberty avenue.

The McCloy Company itself has a complete display of stationery and office supplies in addition to engaging in the engraving and printing business. Its display of fountain pens alone is the largest in the city.

Two other organizations located in the same building complete the business department store by carrying a full stock of typewriters, business machines and office furniture.

While the McCloy Company is distinctly modern in every respect it is one of the oldest organizations in its type of business in this city. It was established in 1879. A large share of the employes may also be classed as veterans. The sales force has an exceptionally large proportion of members who have been with the firm for long periods of years.

WINDOW GLASS TRADE SLOW

Manufacturing conditions in the flat glass industry are holding along substantially unchanged lines, with no new developments of note during the past week, according to American Glass Review. Distribution also is maintained at about the same levels as a week ago.

Window glass was in slow movement this week, with comparatively little increase shown in demand. Notwithstanding this continued lethargy in the market, indications of a favorable nature were not lacking. Inquiries are more numerous and have been since the first of the month.

Demand for plate glass, while below normal for this time of the year, continues relatively better than for other flat glass products. Consumption of this product by the automobile industry has shown a steady increase during recent weeks. Other large consumers, including both the mirror manufacturers and jobbing trade, have not been showing a great deal of activity, however.

SHENANGO MILL SCHEDULE UP

SHARON, April 11. — An improvement was made the past week in operating schedules of Shenango Valley mills. The Farrell works of American Sheet and Tin Plate Company raised the valley average by operating its 30 mills.

Sharon Steel Hoop Company maintained its schedule above the average, working at about 65 per cent, a slight increase over the preceding week.

Carnegie Steel Company maintained its good schedule while the Mercer works of American Sheet and Tin Plate and the Farrell plant of American Steel and Wire Company remained steady.

Dies in Chair After Two-Hour Respite

TRENTON, N. J., April 11.—(AP.)—Daniel Grosso was electrocuted last night for the murder of John Enz, postal clerk, in a mail robbery in Elizabeth, N. J., five years ago.

The execution, set for 8 o'clock, was delayed until 10 at the request of Gov. Morgan F. Larson, to permit Grosso's counsel to ask Chief Justice William E. Gummere of the Supreme Court for a new trial. When no further word came from the Governor or Chief Justice, Principal Keeper Col. Edward Stone at 9:40 decided to proceed with the execution.

FRIGIDAIRE SETS SALES RECORD

NEW YORK, April 11.—Frigidaire retail sales during March in the New York district established a new high record, E. G. Biechler, president of Frigidaire Corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors Corporation, declared that the greatest increase had been achieved in the household division, which sold 75 per cent more Frigidaires than during March a year ago, and 120 per cent more than in February of this year. A substantial increase was noted in the total sales in the New York district, which includes the commercial, ice cream cabinet, and water cooler divisions.

A recent order from the Empire State Building, specifying exclusively Frigidaire water coolers, swelled the March volume of the latter division considerably, he added.

Business Machines Inspected by Pupils

Pittsburgh School of Accountancy's advanced day school class had another taste of practical work recently when it visited local dealers in business machines and watched the various operations comprising mechanical bookkeeping. The Burroughs Adding Machine Company and the Tabulating Machine Company supervised the tour.

LOCAL PRODUCT GETS WIDE RECEPTION

Cement Made on Neville Island Meets With Usual Government Approval

One of the most recent of local products to receive widespread recognition is "Green Bag Cement," manufactured by the Basic Products Company at its Neville Island plant.

The cement is received by the user fresh from production and in perfect condition, uniform in quality and far surpassing the usual governmental and engineering requirements.

REUSE FORMS

When added to fine and coarse aggregates and water, the resultant concrete flows readily and cleanly from mixers, barrows and chutes without segregation, into place. It gives a high factor of density to the concrete with high early and ultimate structural strength, highly resistant to liquid penetration. Forms can be removed earlier and reused while less protection is required in freezing weather.

Finishing is easier, due to the very plastic condition of concrete and curing is more readily accomplished.

SPEEDS PROCESS

"Green Bag Cement" gives to concrete a pleasing natural light stone gray color. Concrete product manufacturers find it speeds up their process and gives extra strength to their products.

Close co-operation by manufacturers is accorded building material dealers who recognize the advantages possible in "Green Bag Cement," and their truck delivery service is augmented by an adequate service made possible by the producer.

Real Estate

The monthly report of the Bureau of Building Inspection issued late yesterday shows that a total of 363 permits were issued last month for construction placed at an estimated cost of $1,105,327. March's volume showed a decided increase over the volume of February when only 265 permits were issued on building to cost $662,880. The next few months are expected to show still further increases, officials of the bureau say.

W. Walter Bauer, Millvale real estate operator, has sold for Jessie L. Bender to Harriett Schran a lot of approximately three-fourths of an acre in Perry highway, McCandless Township. The consideration, according to the broker, was $2,000.

Charles W. Carlson, secretary and treasurer of the Pennsylvania United States Bond and Mortgage Company, will be the speaker at the noonday luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board to be held Tuesday in the Blue Room of the William Penn Hotel. His subject will be "A New Era in Home Financing." Prior to his employment with the Pennsylvania-United States Bond and Mortgage Company, Mr. Carlson was employed by the Union-Fidelity Title Insurance Company.

The University of Pittsburgh late yesterday made application for a building permit to construct the Faulk Elementary School. The estimated cost of construction appeared on the application as $100,000.

William E. Best, first vice president of the United States Building and Loan League of Pittsburgh, has been named chairman of the International Congress of Building Societies and Building and Loan Associations which will meet August 10 in Philadelphia for a five-day session.

Plans are being prepared for a service station at 6301 Forbes street, Fourteenth Ward, to be constructed by the Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania. Bids will be taken shortly.

Applications for building permits follow:

Fourth Ward—University of Pittsburgh, school, University drive, $100,000.

Fourteenth Ward—W. O. Wright, two brick-tile dwellings and garages, 1210-12 Beechwood boulevard, $50,000. R B Mellon, stone extension, 6500 Fifth avenue, $7,000.

Nineteenth Ward—B J. Dugan, brick dwelling, 2018 Plainview avenue, $4,500. J. Moses, two brick dwellings and garages, 1501-03 Princess street, $6,000.

Screw and Bolt Sales To Record Gain

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

OPERATIONS OF THE PITTSBURGH Screw and Bolt Corporation will be restored to a profitable basis during the present month in the opinion of officials. Business on hand indicates that April will be the best month since last October. If current demand continues the company may be said to have definitely turned the corner of the depression.

Operations showed a slight loss during the final quarter of 1930. It is generally expected that the report for the first quarter of the present year will show either negligible profits or a deficit. For the full year of 1930 net profit after all charges was $1,397,053 or 93 cents a share on 1,500,000 shares of capital stock. This compared with $3,271,749 or $2.18 a share in 1929.

Propeller Production Started

WHILE EARNINGS STATEMENTS do not present a particularly encouraging picture, the increase in business indicates that better results may be shown for the second quarter. The company makes a wide range of nut and bolt products in addition to several specialty lines so that it is not dependent on any particular type of industry for the principal volume of its business. A subsidiary, the Colona Manufacturing Company, makes thread protectors used by producers of pipe to prevent damage to their products in shipment.

Commercial production has been started on two types of hollow steel airplane propellers. While the volume of this type of business is not large, officials believe that it will be an important factor in earnings in the future. Army and Navy tests have shown the company's propeller to have exceptional strength and to compare favorably in weight with other types of propellers. The fact that the propeller can be made on a quantity basis with relatively low cost in materials is believed to indicate that it will have a large future.

Current Position Strong

EARNINGS DID NOT cover annual dividend requirements of $1.40 a share last year. The directors have made no change in the rate, having recently declared the regular dividend payable April 18. An exceptionally strong financial position and a large surplus have made this possible. At the close of 1930 current assets of $7,506,835 were about seven and one-half times current liabilities. Cash alone amounted to $2,622,152 and compared with all current liabilities of $1,027,944. Marketable securities amounted to $2,286,503.

Funded debt of $3,926,000 is conservative in comparison to plants of $9,127,677 and total assets of $17,227,830. Even under the unfavorable earnings of last year interest was earned 8.5 times.

In view of the strong financial position it has not been necessary to reflect the slump in earnings on dividend payments. The policy to be followed by directors when dividend action again comes due will undoubtedly be influenced by business conditions at that time, but if there are reasonable signs of improvement in earnings the current rate will probably be continued.

The Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation and its predecessor organization have an unbroken dividend record starting in 1898.

Macy May Issue Mortgage Bonds

NEW YORK, April 11.—As a result of paying for construction of its new 19-story addition to the New York store out of current income, R. H. Macy & Co. reduced its cash balance as of January 31, 1931, to $2,443,076, from $4,478,624 a year previous and $8,242,133 in 1928.

Reduced funds on hand may make necessary some financing which probably will take the form of real estate mortgage bonds to restore cash working capital to a normal level.

Soviet Manganese Output at Record

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Production of manganese ores in Russia in 1929-30 (October 1 to September 30) made a record of 1,444,166 metric tons of concentrated ore, compared with 1,183,880 tons in the preceding year and 1,245,274 in 1913 according to Soviet information received in the Commerce Department.

Exports were 874,518 tons in 1929-30, compared with 889,969 in 1928-29 and 1,192,790 in 1913.

INGOT CAPACITY GAINED DURING PAST YEAR

By B. E. V. LUTY

In one respect the steel industry made more than twice as much progress in 1930 as it progressed on an average in the preceding 10 years. The progress referred to is in productive capacity. This week the American Iron and Steel Institute issued its annual finding of steel ingot making capacity, which as of December 31, 1930, was 66,897,096 tons a year, representing 6.07 per cent increase during the year.

In the five years preceding the average annual increase was 3.02 per cent, and in the five years before that, 1920 to 1924 inclusive, the increase averaged 1.89 per cent a year. Some new capacity has come in since the first of the year and more is to be completed while there are various improvements being made. There is little doubt but that this year's increase will not be much less than that of last year.

GAINS LISTED

Increased capacity does not come about wholly, and scarcely in greater part, by the building of new units as reported from time to time. Furnaces are enlarged, equipment is improved and there are gains merely from practice. Nearly all the work is along the line of seeking for lower costs, increased capacity being in a sense sometimes merely incidental.

The increase in total ingot capacity during 1930 was 3,829,550 tons, made up of 4,360,900 tons increase in basic open-hearth and 28,050, tons in electric, with decreases of 462,000 tons in Bessemer, 95,000 tons in acid open-hearth and 2,400 tons in crucible. Apparently the decrease in Bessemer was chiefly due to the new construction of National Tube Company at McKeesport, where the old Bessemer plant has been dismantled to make way for a new and much larger plant using the duplex process. This involves Bessemer converters, partially refining the pig iron, open-hearth furnaces then finishing the work. The new plant contains three Bessemer converters triple the size of the three old converters, but the whole plant is, of course, classed as open-hearth.

STEEL'S SHOWING

The annual report of the Steel Corporation showed that the corporation increased its ingot capacity by 912,000 tons during 1930, with 1,925,000 tons to come in this year, making a prospective total of 28,000,000 tons. That would leave the corporation at about 40 per cent of the total, the position occupied in recent years and below the percentages of farther back.

Production of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingots in March is officially reported at 3,023,440 tons, representing a rate of 116,286 tons per working day, just 51 per cent over the daily rate in December, which was exceptionally low, below the rate of finished steel. Part of the increase since then is merely an adjustment and part is ordinary seasonal improvement, regularly marked through the month of March. Successive increases were: January, 19.1 per cent; February, 14.5 per cent; March, 10.1 per cent. March started out to show a greater increase, but the rate had a slight downturn late in the month, and this recession is continuing, although quite slowly.

Guidebook on French Markets Published

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Emphasizing the importance of American exporters understanding phases of export technique peculiar to individual foreign markets, W. L. Cooper, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, today announced the release of a guidebook for American business in France. The guidebook is the work of Trade Commissioner Thomas L. Butts, of the bureau's Paris office.

According to Trade Commissioner Butts, selling in France is a different proposition entirely from selling in the United States, or even in other European countries. There are numerous trade practices employed by the French, he says, which must be given full consideration by American exporters if they are to obtain the best results from their efforts in the French market.

ASK ME WHY?

By EVERIT B. TERHUNE

Why are you so hopeful regarding business prospects for 1931?

Because of my understanding of the operation of the law of action and reaction

How do you apply that law in the present case?

There is a definite law of diminishing returns; there is likewise a definite law of increasng returns. In 1929 business profits were obtained on an inflated cost and overhead basis. As a result we have been enduring the law of diminishing returns for over 18 months. Now we are ready to work for profits on a deflated cost basis. It is my opinion that profits may be surprisingly interesting by the end of 1931.

ALLEGHENY COUNTY
"Public Improvements Promote Progress"

Flaugherty's Run Bridge No. 2, located on the Stoops Ferry and Shousetown Road one mile south of Glen Willard, in Moon Township, replaces an inadequate and poorly aligned bridge structure. To correct the poor alignment it was necessary to relocate the bridge as well as to make a channel change in the stream.

The new bridge is a rectangular rigid frame reinforced concrete structure, 40 feet wide and 18½ feet high at the center. It carries a 30-foot roadway and has a 5-foot sidewalk on the downstream side.

This contract was awarded to Aloe-Hanson Engineering and Construction Company on September 5, 1930. The source of funds for the improvement was the 1928 People's Bond issue. The structure will be completed early in 1931.

'MUCKRACKING' EXPLOITS TOLD BY STEFFENS

Biography Recalls Exposes Of Corrupt Government; Praise Given W. R. Hearst

Lincoln Steffens, the famous retired muckraker and student of sociology, has written his autobiography. It is an amazingly interesting story, as daring and candid as Rosseau's Confessions.

Steffens has devoted many chapters of his book to his early exposures of corrupt government under the political "boss" system, which prevailed then as it does now. His articles attracted nation-wide attention and stirred the liberal-minded to political activity, which culminated in the Progressive movement.

While Steffens was still hammering at political corruption, Theodore Roosevelt rose to prominence as a New York police commissioner.

'T. R.' SHOWS WRATH

In a conversation with Jacob Riis, who was working with Roosevelt, Steffens suggested that T. R. had the presidency in mind. They decided to ask him and when they did, Roosevelt yelled:

"Don't you dare ask me that. Don't you put such ideas in my head.

"You must never, either of you, ever remind a man at work on a political job that he may be President. It almost always kills him politically. He loses his nerve; he can't do his work; he gives up the very traits that are making him a possibility.

"I, for instance, I am going to do great things here, hard things that require all the courage, ability, work that I am capable of, and I can do them if I think of them alone. But if I get to thinking of what it might lead to—"

He stopepd and lowered his voice and said slowly:

"I must be wanting to be President; every young man does. But I won't let myself think of it; I must not, because if I do I will begin to work for it. I'll be careful, calculating, cautious in word and act, and so I'll beat myself. Go away and don't ever mention that to me again."

INTERVIEWS HEARST

Steffens tells an interesting incident that happened in November, 1906, when he was on the staff of the American Magazine. The editor assigned him to write an article about William Randolph Hearst.

Steffens writes:

"I was to show him up, him and his views. That was not said. But I was not supposed to be in any need of instruction. I was all right. I was influenced by all this pressure. I had an interview with Mr. Hearst on a train from Chicago to New York, and I landed in New York with a clear sense of the man.

"Mr. Hearst respected his father and his father's ideas and ideals, which he, the son, alone may have heard. In a larger way, it was some of his father's ends that the son was pursuing.

"But William Randolph Hearst would have done what he has done without the inspiration or the riches of George Hearst. He had strength, too; there was breed there; the mother, Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, was somebody, and she backed her son as the father had led him.

"In my article I quoted the interview, and I made some comment, but I did not say what I really thought.

DEMOCRACY SOUGHT

"I thought that Hearst was a great man, able, self-dependent, self-educated (though he had been to Harvard) and clear-headed; he had no moral illusions; he saw straight as far as he saw, and he saw pretty far, further than I did then; and, studious of the methods which he adopted after experimentation, he was driving toward his unannounced purpose: to establish some measure of democracy, with patient but ruthless force.

"He had ambition, not to sit in the offices he ran for, but to do something in them, to do himself things which his candidates never did satisfactorily.

"In my article I said that he proposed, like a rich man, to give the people democracy, as others of his sort give charity or an art museum. I did not understand myself then what a part dictatorship has to play in democracy. * * * I was just getting over my own righteousness, but I had not yet arrived where Hearst was born, apparently, at the point of view whence one sees that it is economic, rather than moral, forces that count, as with me in this very article. I compromised in it with my colleagues to keep my job.

"The only criticism I think now, since I have watched his career, to be worth writing is that Hearst, with his patience, his superb tolerance, does not require his own editors to understand his policies. He is so far ahead of his staffs that they can hardly see him! and so, of course, they cannot make either this remarkable man of his perfectly rational ideas comprehensible to his readers, the people Hearst would like to see served."

Steffens' frankness in admitting the editorial pressure that caused him to withhold his real views of Mr. Hearst is exceedingly rare and is in itself a mark of greatness.

Forbes

Detroit Tire Plant Running at Capacity

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

WE HEAR MUCH about the inadequacy of gold to keep the world's business going on an even keel. I have just received a letter from an old newspaper colleague in Johannesburg, the towering city that has risen on the Witwatersrand gold reef, in which he states that production has been breaking all records. When I lived there, almost 30 years ago, there was talk that the gold deposits were nearing exhaustion. Yet production today is greater than ever—around $20,000,000 a month.

There, as here, complaining is rife about burdensome taxation. The rank and file of whites in South Africa are disposed to be anti-capital, especially the Boer farmers, who comprise the main part of the rural population.

A DETROIT FRIEND writes:

"The tire plant of the U. S. Rubber Company here is running at capacity production, and the same is true of the company's Gillette plant at Eau Claire, Wis., and the Samson plant, Los Angeles. Throughout the entire period of national depression employment at the very important plant here has been practically stable; in fact, the force has not varied 500 within the year. Since President F. B. Davis took charge, several new production methods have been introduced which have greatly benefited the company. Mr. Davis, as you probably know, is a great believer in taking his associates and workers into his confidence by laying all the cards on the table and talking things over before vital decisions are made."

PEOPLE KEEP themselves clean, good times or bad.

Out of 49 soap manufacturers, comprising fully 90 per cent of the entire industry, only two reduced wages and only four curtailed their working forces last year.

How was such phenomtnal stability attained?

Manager Roscoe C. Edlund, of the Association of American Soap and Glycerine Producers, after conducting a thorough survey, explains:

"Nine companies avoided layoffs by putting men at work on changes, repairs and improvements in plants and equipment; eight reduced hours without reducing wage scales; five guarantee employment; four eliminated or reduced overtime, while three manufactured for stock.

"The soap trade seems to be keenly conscious of the desirability of maintaining a permanent body of employes. Soap manufacturers are aware that employment stabilization is a problem to be solved by industry itself and that, while state and federal governments have a useful function in collecting and distributing information on this subject, employers must find their own solution."

This must be industrial America's next objective: Stabilization of employment and either guaranteed work for so many weeks a year or provision made for taking care of those cast idle through no fault of their own.

FEW OF THE biggest fellows have been buying stocks during recent weeks. They first want to see more decisive improvement in business.

Complaint Lodged Against Oil Firms

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Federal Trade Commission has been asked by the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association to issue complaints against certain of the major oil companies because, it is alleged, these major companies are depriving the independent oil producers refiners and marketers of retail outlets through exclusive selling agreements with independent retail gasoline stations. Filing of this application has been announced by Rodney J. Alexander, secretary of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association.

Advance of Security List Should Last More Than Year, Friday Believes

NEW YORK, April 11.—A substantial business recovery, which is a development devoutly to be wished for, must be preceded by an improving bond market.

Fundamentals have long been favorable to a strong bond market, but external developments, such as injury to public confidence resulting from political revolutions abroad and, toward the close of 1930, of bank suspensions at home, have delayed a vigorous and sustained wave of investment buying of fixed maturity obligations. In the first quarter of 1931, declining railroad earnings, moreover, have actuated numerous individual and institutional investors to switch from railroad to public utility bonds.

Mr. Rukeyser

UPSWING SEEN

But there are approaching signs of an end of the sequence of events, which have alarmed the bond buyer. David Friday, brilliant economist, who constitutionally finds it difficult to be pessimistic about longer term American economic prospects, thinks the country is on the verge of a broad upswing in bonds, which should last for more than a year.

He says:

"The hesitation and suspicion caused by (adverse) occurrences are passing and when they pass more completely we can have a good bond market and a thorough business revival. We are likely to have a rise in bonds extending from 12 to 15 months. It would not be at all surprising if in that market first-rate bonds will see a level of prices higher than they reached in 1928. The same sort of forces are at work now in the bond market which were present in 1921, 1924 and 1927, when the important bond markets of the past 10 years got under way.

SITUATION EASY

"The Federal Reserve situation, which is always a guide to the future of the bond market, has seldom been easier in all its history. With the return flow of hoarded currency which will come when confidence is restored, will remain easy throughout the spring and summer.

"In this situation we are bound to develop a large demand for bonds. The bankers of the United States are not going to leave their credit balances lying idle at the Federal Reserve for many weeks before they put them into use. They will do this by buying good bonds, and, in my opinion, they will make a profit on the operation. . . . There will be an increasing demand for funds with which to undertake the construction of durable goods. If that demand is supplied through the bond market, the revival of activity in the construction of such goods will become pronounced, and prosperity will be well on its way again."

Sinclair Completes Pipe Line Plans

NEW YORK, April 11.—Plans have been completed whereby Sinclair will be able to ship 60,000 barrels of crude oil daily either to its northern or gulf coast refineries under favorable joint tariff arrangements with the Prairie Pipe Line system. This will be accomplished by the construction by the Sinclair Texas Pipe Line Company of a 12-inch line from East Texas to a connection with the Prairie Pipe Line Company at Mexia. From the Gulf, Sinclair will be in position to ship oil to the Atlantic seaboard.

Fifth Ave. Store Altered by Douglas

Complete interior alterations and new, modern, standard W. L. Douglas front have been installed at the store of W. L. Douglas Shoe Company at 203 Fifth avenue. The store is one of a large number situated in the principal cities of the United States.

The interior has an attractive arrangement displaying a very large stock of footwear for men, women, boys and girls.

Less Cars Handled By Rock Island

CHICAGO, April 11.—During the week ended April 7, Rock Island Railroad, handled 27,268 revenue cars, against 34,238 in the like 1930 period.

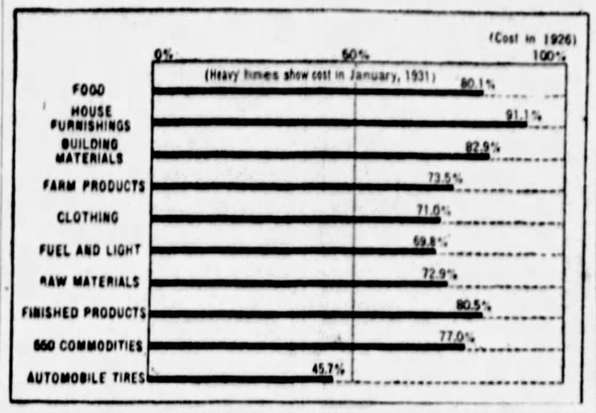
HOW COSTS HAVE FALLEN



DECLINE OF COSTS SINCE 1926: TIRES WENT THE FURTHEST

BUSINESS INDEX DROPS LOWER

NEW YORK, April 11.—Business continues to crawl along the astonishingly flat trough that has lasted more than four months. Week to week and even month to month movements are slight, sporadic, still unsignificant, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

Steel activity slides off more swiftly from its feeble spring peak, with increasing price uncertainty, but persistent hope of improved demand later from summer construction contracts. Building alone evidences any vigor, but only with support of public money. Other indicators are static, and the index dithers indecisively around the average of recent months, with a slight slump in the last few weeks. For the week ended April 4 it settled at 79.8 per cent, against 81.3 in the preceding week and 96.0 per cent in the same week last year.

Background conditions, excepting only encouraging crop prospects, are not conducive to confidence. Stagnant or sagging security markets indicate increasing caution and indecision in anticipation of further dividend and wage readjustments. Chronic weakening of commodity prices with continued credit contraction is stimulating restrictive agreements on production with governmental support or compulsion, thereby aggravating unemployment and speeding socialization.

DRESS EXHIBIT PLANNED

NEW YORK, April 11.—The International Association of Garment Manufacturers, the Cotton Textile Institute and the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants, acting in co-operation with more than 10,000 retail stores throughout the United States, have completed plans for one of the most extensive countrywide displays of cotton wash dresses ever staged, to continue for one week beginning April 20. The organizations referred to, together with member companies, have been working for the past several months in preparing displays which are to be sent to stores in every state.

The purpose of the movement is to bring to the attention of the public the revolution which has occurred in wash dresses. These are now being styled in accordance with the latest dictates from Paris. Leading manufacturers are also guaranteeing absolute fastness for the dyes used. Leading women throughout the United States are taking part in the movement.

The American Institute of Laundries is also co-operating through member laundries in every community and emphasizing the washability of the fast-colored dresses.

Surplus Freight Cars Take Drop

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Class I railroads on March 23 had 621,926 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the car service division of the American Railway Association announced. This was a decrease of 4,964 cars compared with March 15, at which time there were 626,890 surplus freight cars.

COST OF TIRES TAKES DROP

Necessity will compel millions of motorists to put new tires on their cars this spring. Economy should induce millions of others, whose tires are dangerously worn, to do the same thing. The above chart, prepared by the General Tire and Rubber Company, from official United States government figures, shows why motorists today can easily afford to buy the best tires made.

No other commodity has dropped as far in price in the past five years as have automobile tires. Official figures just made public by the United States Department of Labor prove this. Tires today cost less than half as much as they did in 1926, while the average drop in the cost of 550 commodities from 1926 to 1931 is 23 per cent. Food costs four-fifths as much as it did in 1926, and house furnishings cost more than nine-tenths as much, but tires only cost 45.7 per cent as much.

GASOLINE PRICE DROPS 48%

NEW YORK, April 11.—American Petroleum Institute's survey of the cost of gasoline to motorists of 50 representative cities of the United States shows that while the average retail price of the fuel has decreased more than 48 per cent in comparison with that of 10 years ago, the average gasoline tax rate has increased more than 2,650 per cent, and now is adding from 13 to 52 per cent to the price the motorist pays.

The survey, which included cities in every state from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore., disclosed that the average retail price of gasoline on March 1, 1931, was 14.46 cents per gallon, or 13.79 cents below the average retail price, 28.25 cents per gallon, of March 1, 1921, a decline of 48.8 per cent. During the same period the average gasoline tax rate increased from less than 1 cent per gallon, .0014, as of March 1, 1921, to 3.86 cents per gallon on March 1, 1931, a gain of 2,657 per cent. In 1921 only 16 states were taxing gasoline. Today all states and the District of Columbia impose such a levy.

Plan to Dissolve Burlap Exchange

NEW YORK, April 11.—Commodity market circles had reports that plans are under way for the liquidation of all accounts and for formal dissolution of the New York Burlap and Jute Exchange.

At a recent meeting members of the exchange in favor of dissolution were in the majority, but failed to muster the two-thirds vote required by New York State laws for dissolving a corporation.

LITTLE CHANGE IN BUSINESS SITUATION

Improvement Reported in Some Lines; Building Trade Continues Slow

The general business situation shows comparatively little change with slight improvement reported in a few lines and a falling off in others, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Retail trade during Easter week showed considerable activity, particularly in women's and children's wearing apparel, while men's wearing apparel lagged behind rather noticeably. Jobbers of dry goods, hosiery and shoes report business still well below normal, with buying largely for immediate requirements.

Purchases in the above lines appear to be principally of moderate and low-priced merchandise. The leather market continues quiet, although prices of some grades of leather have advanced slightly. Lumber and building materials continue in rather slow demand, construction work being still in comparatively small volumes, although several large projects are under way. The amount of building is materially lower than it has been for a number of years, and residential building is particularly slow.

COLLECTIONS SLOW

Manufacturers of confectionery report quite an active volume of business prior to Easter, although prices were lower than a year ago, and the total volume was estimated at about 20 per cent lower. Not so much change is noted in the demand for sanitary and heating equipment lines also continues quiet.

Production of crude oil is at a slightly lower rate, while a decrease in stocks of gasoline in storage is also shown. Production of bituminous coal continues to average about 15 per cent lower than a year ago, with demand still slow.

There has been a slight improvement in collections in some lines, although the average continues slow.

OHIO RAILROAD TO SUSPEND

ALLIANCE, O., April 11.—Operations of the Youngstown and Ohio River Railroad will be suspended Saturday, April 25, by Briggs & Turvias, Chicago and Alliance interests, who now own the road, it was learned.

J. D. Deweese, who has been serving as general manager of the road, said that an order placing an embargo on all incoming freight, and effective April 25, had been issued. Notice also has been served on the postoffice at Pittsburgh that the road will suspend activity on that date.

After the suspension of operations, steps will be taken to salvage the road, according to L. P. Kulka, one of the men who purchased the road on the auction block several weeks ago.

Deweese said that negotiations looking toward a merger have been under way for several days between the present owners and representatives of the Montour, Wheeling and Lake Erie and Pittsburgh and West Virginia railroads.

Parks With Thousands of Acres

Pittsburgh has 17 parks, ranging from a tiny park at The Point to Schenley Park with 422 acres. Carnegie Institute, in Schenley Park, houses magnificent art galleries, museum, hall of statuary, music hall, library, and hall of architecture; while Highland Park accommodates a zoological garden. Besides the city parks the county maintains great parks North and South of the city, in which there is a total of more than 3,000 acres.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

SUN LIFE BOOK PROFIT 8.21% ON STOCKS

Common Share Holdings Are $23,166,000 Above Cost; Holds Many Utilities

NEW YORK, April 11.—As of December 31, 1930, the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada held 6,041,966 shares of common stocks in American and Canadian corporations, and 127,625 common shares in foreign corporations, making a total of 6,169,591 common shares plus 4,373 warrants.

The American and Canadian issues had a market value at the close of the year of $302,034,280, against a cost of $276,727,135. Adding in holdings of foreign common stocks aggregate market value was $305,308,288 against a cost of $282,142,008. Profit on the entire holdings of common shares therefore was $23,166,280, or 8.21 per cent.

In the case of the common stock investments in American and Canadian corporations, the Sun Life had a profit at the close of the year of $25,307,145, or 9.14 per cent.

UTILITY HOLDINGS

The burden of profit-making rested, at the close of 1930, entirely on the public utilities; that group alone had a market value in excess of cost. In general the utility common stock investments antedate the other equity purchases. Thus purchases of American Telephone, Commonwealth Edison and Detroit Edison began some eight years ago; the Sun Life entered the Edison Electric Illuminating of Boston, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and Public Service of New Jersey situations a little later, but in the majority of cases the buying began three and four years ago.

OWNS 292,313 "GAS"

Its largest investment is in Consolidated Gas of New York which it began to buy in 1928. At the close of 1930 it was the largest known single holder of the stock with ownership of 292,313 shares.

Stocks of American railroads began to be taken into the portfolio in 1927, bank and trust company stocks appeared in 1928 while industrial and miscellaneous shares came into the picture about the same time. Investments in some Canadian corporation common stocks go back many years. Bell Telephone of Canada, for example, was bought into a quarter century ago and a few Canadian banks and industrials one and two decades back.

VOTE MACHINES SURE IN PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—(AP.)—The way was cleared yesterday for the use of voting machines in every ward at the mayoralty primary next September when Judge Harry S. McDevitt dismissed a taxpayers' action which challenged the legality of 500 machines ordered by the County Commissioners.

The commissioners had announced after a conference with Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, a few hours earlier, that they would go ahead with the purchase of voting machines for every district in the city as soon as the obstacles of such action were removed.

The principal obstacle was a bill in equity filed in Common Pleas Court by John W. Glover to set aside a contract between the city and the Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, N. Y., for the purchase of 500 machines. This is the bill dismissed by Judge McDevitt.

COUPLE ROBBED OF $30,465

CHICAGO, April 11.—(AP.)—Threatening torture and death, four robbers, two of them masked, held up Frank W. Means, president of the Chicago Towel Company, and his wife, in their home early today, and fled with jewelry and other valuable worth $30,465. The victims were held captives for more than an hour.

The Means were greeted by the quartet as they entered the lobby to their apartment. Mrs. Means evaded them by rushing through the door and slamming it. They called to her that unless they were admitted they would kill Means.

Once inside, they threatened torture unless the couple handed over their valuables.

Victim of Easter Auto Crash Dies

BUTLER, Pa., April 11.—(AP.)—Quay Ellenberger, 27, injured in an automobile accident Easter Sunday, died yesterday. Paul Fisher, driver of a car which figured in the crash, was held under a $500 bond. An inquest will be held Monday.

New Philadelphia Gas Rate to be Cut

NEW PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—City Council last night overrode Mayor W. F. Hurst's veto of the East Ohio Gas Company's franchise, which will clip 33 cents a month from 3,500 local consumers' gas bills.

Professional Traders Hold Steel Report As Standoff.

In both professional camps it had been expected that the steel tonnage would prove the means of breaking the veritable deadlock that has existed in the market since midweek. Constructionists counted on a larger increase than had been generally expected, while bear forces were hopeful that the report would prove sufficiently discouraging to influence fresh liquidation. But as events turned out the corporations report failed to prove much of an issue for either side, and as a result the market remained pretty much in the same position it had occupied over the last few days. The increase reported did not serve as much of a talking point for the bulls, but certainly on the other hand it did not provide anything in the way of fresh ammunition for the bears.

Speculative Wall street is once more given to paying a greater amount of attention to the situation in the bond market. Perhaps the unsettlement, which has been prevalent in the investment market for some weeks now, has been quite a factor in dampening interest in the speculative list. A period of lasting improvement in business, and the security markets as well, following such a depression as we have been experiencing, is usually foreshadowed by marked and lasting betterment in bond prices. The way out of past depressions has invariably been heralded by sustained improvement in the investment list, and while the public has undoubtedly developed a greater degree of stockmindedness, as the saying goes in this instance, there are still many who hold to the older order of things.

While liquidation undoubtedly is playing an important role in the decline of railroad stocks, there is evidence that the carrier shares have been feeling the weight of rather extensive bear pressure also. Presumably the selling of the rails by professional operators has been designed to provide a base for covering in other parts of the list. At any rate it is quite generally conceded that professional selling for the decline has been of more or less substantial proportions over the last few days. And in support of this theory it is learned that several of the market's most nimble traders, one of whom was active on the bull side in February, but has more recently cast his lot with the bears, were heavy borrowers of railroad shares in the stock loan market after the close on Thursday.

Directors of Nash Motor evidently are confident of better things for their company in the months ahead. At any rate that is the impression conveyed by the action of the board in ordering the payment of the quarterly dividend of $1 a share due at this time. Net profit for the first quarter of its fiscal year, that is in the three months ended February 28, was $1,099,193, equivalent to 40 cents a share on the stock, as compared with $1,782,512, or the equivalent of 65 cents a share on the stock in the same period a year ago. In other words, the company feels justified in dipping into surplus to the extent of 60 cents a share to make up the deficit in earnings as against dividend requirements for the period. But Nash at the end of its fiscal year in November had actual cash and government securities amounting to roughly $38,000,000. The dividend was reduced last August to the present $4 basis from the $6 rate which had been in force previous to that time.

According to a leading commission source, attention should be given to the profit possibilities in some new or rehabilitated industries in which the public shows little faith at this time, but which are obviously improving in the face of a decline for others. Among them are public utilities, aviation, radio, trucks and buses, food distribution and electricity. Companies which may be slated to take or continue leadership in these lines are, among others, United Corporation, Electric Power and Light, United Aircraft, Radio, General Motors, National Dairy Products and General Electric.

Reports circulated in financial quarters that United States Steel is likely to reduce its dividend this year are regarded as absurd in well informed circles. It is pointed out that the company earned $9.12 a share in 1930, and that it will be necessary to earn only $4.88 a share in 1931 in order to cover the $14 dividend distribution for the two depression years. In the 1920-1921 depression, United States earned $5.08 a share for the two years and paid $10 a share. Therefore, even if Steel barely earns preferred dividend requirements in 1931, deductions from surplus to pay the present $7 dividend would not be much larger than in 1920-1921.

GARBAGE SUIT PAYMENT O.K.'D

The settlement of the suit of the City of Pittsburgh against the American Reduction Company, by which the company agreed to pay $315,000 as a refund for excess payments for garbage removal over a period of several years, was approved by Judge Sylvester J. Snee in Common Pleas Court, on petition of Attorney Edwin W. Smith and the suit marked discontinued on the records.

The suit was filed January 16, 1929, as the result of charges prepared by former City Controller Henry O. Evans regarding overpayments on the contract for garbage collection and the law firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay was engaged to prosecute the claim.

Commercial Plane Sales Take Gain

NEW YORK, April 11.—Forty-six of the major airplane manufacturers report a total production of 172 commercial and military airplanes valued at $1,864,115, according to the February copyright report of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. Sales of commercial and military airplanes during February totaled 163 units, valued at $1,923,474. Production of commercial airplanes increased from 59 units valued at $248,435 in January, to 88 units, with a value of $562,480 in February, the report shows.

Normal Auto Trade Seen by Scoville

DETROIT, April 11.—The business picture looks more encouraging and the automobile industry is steadily climbing toward normalcy, according to John W. Scoville, chief statistician of Chrysler Corporation.

If business continues to improve at the rate it has the last 90 days, it is not too optimistic to predict that by mid-summer the automobile industry will be enjoying something like its normal business, he said.

Aluminum Earns 92 Cents a Share

Aluminum, Ltd., and wholly-owned subsidiaries report for year ended December 31, 1930, net income of $968,567, after depreciation, depletion and income taxes, equal, after deducting $442,000 dividends accrued during 1930 on 130,000 shares of 6 per cent preferred to 92 cents a share on 572,678 shares of common outstanding at the end of the year. In 1929 the company reported net income of $2,379,020, equal to $4.15 a share on the common.

Heckert Re-Elected Fireproofing Chief

At the annual meeting of National Fireproofing Company of Canada, Ltd., directors representing American interests on the board were re-elected. S. F. Heckert was re-elected president.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 11.—Firmness characterized grain prices early today owing to word that European bread stocks were decreasing and that no exporting country were pressing to sell. Absence of rain in the spring wheat regions of the northwest tended also to uphold values.

Opening at ¼ off to ¼ cent up, wheat afterwards held near to the initial range. Corn started at ⅜ decline to ¼ advance, and subsequently hardened.

DAMROSCH BROADCASTS P. T. BARNUM PAGEANT TONIGHT

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Story of the Modern Reader

NEW YORK, April 11.

MR. MODERN READER had just finished a new book. Before putting it down, he glanced through it once again. A strange light came into his eyes. He turned to his wife.

"I have read a book a night for the past six months," he muttered feverishly. "I am a college graduate, yet I can understand but ten books in a hundred. What kind of novelists are we developing these days?"

"If they are authors, I am an author too. I am going to write the first chapter of a novel and mail it to a publishing house. I am going to write it right now."

"But, darling," she said, "you are not a writer. You are a hat manufacturer."

He shook his head doggedly.

"If they are authors, I am an author. Give me that pencil. I will do a modern novel. Give it to me, I say."

He began to scribble. Furiously. Wildly. Angrily. Thus:

* * *

It was a beautiful night down by the old railroad bridge. The frogs were croaking.

"Boop-boop-a-doop," they were saying.

Popeye sighed. To be alone on a night like this. If only Millie would come. The stars and Millie. Just Millie. Millie, the girl with the dancing eyes. The ex-wife. Suddenly it began to rain.

Then Millie came.

"Boop-boop-a-doop," croaked the frogs.

For six hours Popeye said nothing. The rain stopped. Popeye looked at Millie and then at his corncob pipe.

Millie screamed.

"I hate you," she smiled. "I am no longer yours. I belong to the world."

Popeye put his pipe in his pocket and brought out a cigar. A foul cigar. Why not, when the world is so foul and evil? Evil as you and I. He bit off the tip and threw the cigar away.

"You'll come with me," he grunted.

Millie screamed.

"If you want the truth, you can have it. I'm in love with somebody else. With Little Sneezer, from up Chicago way."

Popeye spat contemptuously into the river. A mile away a ferryboat rocked.

"I hate that guy," he said. "He's a Jew on roller skates. Hasn't got class. Never killed more than seven guys that I know of. Come on with me."

He dug his filthy nails into her white flesh. Pure, sweet, white, clean, quivering flesh. Millie drank a case of gin and broke bottle after bottle on Popeye's skull. Popeye never budged. He merely whinnied like a horse.

"Stop your yelling," he said. "Come on."

They moved along. Soon it began to rain again. The dawn came up like thunder. In the fields little children were playing. Brats they were. Some of them future ex-wives. Millie saw them and screamed.

"Boop-boop-a-doop," croaked the frogs.

In his office the attorney stood very close to the woman. She was a Sob Sister on a local paper. An ex-wife.

"I can free your man," said the attorney. "Little Sneezer can be sprung."

He moved still closer to Mildred. The Sob Sister shuddered. On the wall, a clock ticked loudly. Tick-tock. Tick-tock. Life was passing by. What was life for anyhow? Good life. Sweet life. Tick-tock. Tick-tock.

"Yes," repeated the lawyer. "I will free him for you. If you—"

Mildred shuddered. He was very near to her now.

"If what?" she repeated, frightened.

"Just if," said the lawyer.

"If?" said Mildred.

"If," murmured the lawyer.

Mildred jumped to her feet. Pretty feet they were. She talked rapidly.

"What is love?" she cried. "Just a passing jest. But I love Little Sneezer. He is mine, you hear? All mine. And I am his. My lips are pledged to him alone. You are a beast, you hear? A Beast!"

Little Sneezer walked up Broadway. It was his Broadway. Your Broadway. My Broadway. It was nearly dawn now. Lights were beginning to blink.

A bullet went through Sneezer's hat.

"The rats," he muttered as two more bullets went by. "They must be out to get me."

He drew his gun and backed into a hallway. His gun barked twice. Four policemen and two apple sellers fell to the ground. Little Sneezer grinned.

"I can still give it," he grunted, "and they still can't take it."

Sneezer mounted the stairs. A man stopped him.

"Where are you going?" said the man.

Sneezer put four bullets into him. On the next floor, he met a girl. She held a door open.

"Come on in and join my party?" she asked.

"Nothin' doin'," said Sneezer. "I'm through with dames. They only get you in trouble."

"Okay," he said. "I'll join your party."

There were 12 other men at the party. Sneezer shot them all. He gathered the girl in his arms.

"Tell me, girlie," he said. "Are you an ex-wife?"

* * *

Mr. Modern Reader had finished his first chapter. Addressing an envelope to the publishing house of Knopf, Doubleday and Schuster, he enclosed the copy you just read above. With his eyes wilder than ever, he rushed from his home to the nearest mail box.

Then Mr. Modern Reader went completely daffy. He began to bite the lamp post. He began to cry and shout. So, pretty soon a policeman came and led him gently away.

A week later Mrs. Modern Reader sat in her home. She was weeping. And why not? Her husband, the doctors said, was completely insane. He was in the bughouse for life. They said the poor sap had always been a little bit daffy.

On the table was a letter. It was addressed to her husband and was from the publishing firm of Knopf, Doubleday & Schuster. Mrs. Modern Reader opened the envelope:

"Dear Sir:" the letter read. "If you will come to our office as soon as convenient we would like to sign a contract with you. You have written the first chapter of what will undoubtedly turn out to be the great American novel."

Lloyd, Recovering, Seeks Amusement

LOS ANGELES, April 11.—(AP.)—Harold Lloyd, the film comedian, recovering from an appendicitis operation performed Thursday, asked his first hospital visitor, his wife, to join him in a game of backgammon.

Dr. William Branch, while accepting the challenge by the film comedian as a favorable sign, demurred, asked him to wait another day.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, April 11.—Within the period of two years the 15-minute program has become the most popular on the air waves.

Owing its origin and its success to Amos 'n' Andy it first embraced all comedy teams hoping to duplicate the success of the blackface stars. Later the 15 minute period began to find favor in the broadcasting salons as the most desirable time limits for individual music recitals.

Today, the schedules of radio are crowded with 15-minute turns—tenors voicing Tin Pan Alley's sentimentallities, sopranos paying tribute to Wagner and Stephen Foster, pianists, organists, ukelele crooners, banjo crooners, crooners.

Experimenting with tenors—the type of voice most in favor with the easy chairs—Columbia struck gold with Monsieur Downey. They offered his high notes, all concerned with Broadway's idea of romance, as competition to Amos 'n' Andy and gained for him an enormous following, especially in the East (our spies report M. Downey causes no stampede to the loudspeakers in the Midwest or South.) Such an enormous following that NBC's generalissimos decided something must be done about it.

* * *

The generalissimos, obviously, deny that Downey's success is a cause for concern. Garner one of them and he will blandly state that he never even heard of the balladeer. Yet, their present strategy indicates they are alert to the demand of listeners for a crooning tenor at the mystic hour of 7.

Why a tenor must be scheduled at 7 is one of those baffling problems that the psychologists of the air channels have not yet been able to fathom. Strange, come to think of it! Strange, that a first-class orchestra, blending, say, the spirit of Gounod and Gershwin, is not preferred at the hour when digestion is uppermost!

At any event, NBC is now also experimenting with a crooning tenor. It has brought within its fold Gene Austin, whose popularity heretofore has been chiefly confined to phonograph records and to the razzle-dazzle duties of a master of ceremonies in Los Angeles movie palaces—scheduled him two evenings a week to test, as it were, his appeal to the dining-chairs. If he clicks his crooning will be promptly put on a daily basis.

* * *

Though the program surrounding Chevalier has been extended to an hour the French singing comedian's part in it is still limited to three songs. No star of the stage or screen recruited by the microphone men for regular weekly appearances has proved, according to listeners, such a disappointment. The very fact that his duties were not enlarged with the expansion of the program which features him is proof that the sponsors are basing their chief appeal upon other portions of the period. Chevalier's is a personality that needs to be seen as well as heard. Television must figure largely in his prayers.

* * *

Arthur Pryor has resurrected Sousa's old "Manhattan Beach" march. It is one of the zippiest of them all . . . Old family hymnals eventually find their way in the mail to the desk of Phillips Lord, of Seth Parker fame. . . . Lord will probably dispose of them to Henry Ford's early American village . . . Roxy and his gang have returned to New York from a tour of one-night stands. Even Chicago was a one-night stand, the most enthusiastic of all in its greetings. . . . The vaudeville magnificoes continue to regard radio dance bands as one of the best headline possibilities at their Palace Theater, New York. The strong box of the N. B. C. is tapped, 'tis said, for whatever financial burden is attached to the Sunday morning concerts of the Roxy Symphony Orchestra. On rainy days the financial burden is heavy.

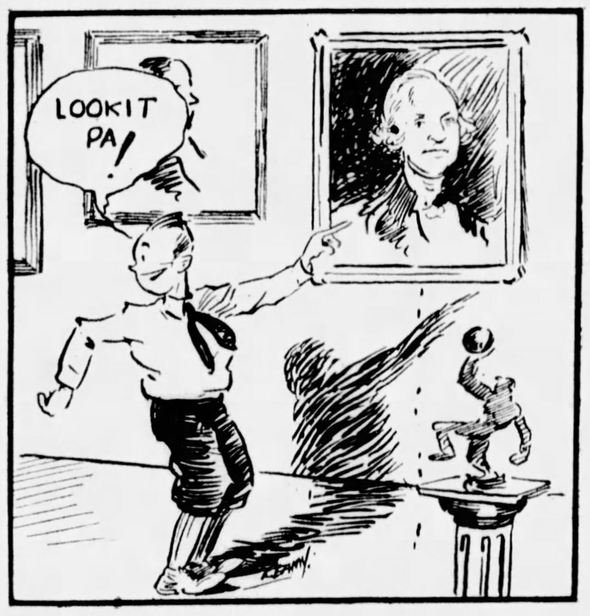
WIN YOUR SHARE OF $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES

CONTEST PICTURE No. 7



Name of the City or Town ..... State

WHAT CITY OR TOWN DOES THIS PICTURE REPRESENT?

The answer to the above cartoon is among these names: Monessen, Scottdale, Bedford, California, Berlin, Uniontown, Washington, Punxsutawney, Meadville, Tyrone, Altoona, Carnegie, Castle Shannon, Beaver Falls, Johnstown, Wilkinsburg, East Liberty, Oakland, Allegheny or Butler, Pa.; Wheeling or Morgantown, W. Va.; Canton, Mansfield or Sebring, Ohio. Do not submit the answers to the cartoons until the end of the contest.

Read These Simple Rules:

(1) Under the title, "Know Your Own Home Town," the daily and Sunday Sun-Telegraph will publish a series of cartoons to run consecutively for 40 days, starting Sunday, April 5th. All of these cartoons will represent a city, town or borough in the reading area of the Sun-Telegraph and prizes will be awarded to readers who submit the neatest and most nearly correct set of answers.

(2) A total of $1,000.00 in cash prizes will be awarded, divided as indicated in another part of this announcement.

(3) This offer is open to all except employes of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and their families. You pay nothing. Files of the Sun-Telegraph are available at the Public Library or at the office of the Sun-Telegraph and you may make tracings of the cartoons if you desire.

(4) Answers to the contest are not to be submitted until the entire set of 40 has been printed. After the last (No. 40) cartoon has appeared, entrants will be allowed 15 days to submit their sets of answers. They are to be addressed to the "Know Your Own Home Town" Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

(5) All answers submitted become the property of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and none will be returned. The judges will be appointed by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

BUCS, TIGERS RESUME PLAY

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Cubs' Starting Pitcher. | Hafey Only Holdout.
Hornsby Defying Fate. | Berg True to Dope.
Anderson Irish Coach. | Stanley Cup Fight.

BUCS HAVE EDGE ON ROOT AND SMITH

IN ANNOUNCING THAT Charley Root or Bob Smith probably will be his pitching selection for the opening game against the Pirates in Chicago next Tuesday afternoon, Manager Rogers Hornsby expresses the confidence that he can't go wrong in his final choice; that no matter which of these hurlers he picks, the man drawing the slab assignment is going to prove too tough for the Buccaneers. Maybe so, but a glance at the dope sheets gives the impression that the Corsairs will have a better chance to win against either Root or Smith than they would have against any of the other stars of the Cub staff.

Charley Root

For neither of the possible starters named by Hornsby has held any terrors for Pittsburgh batsmen in recent years. Both have been "cousins" to the Pirates. This is particularly true of Root, who is believed to be the Bruin pilot's first choice for the curtain-raiser. Charley took the measure of the Bucs in an exhibition game on the coast this spring, but his record against them in championship encounters does not augur well for his success if he faces them in the first pennant tilt of 1931.

FOR THE LAST three seasons, Root has been one of the most ineffective pitchers in the league against the Pittsburgh club. In none of the three years did he beat the Rovers in more than a single game, and against the three games he won from them in that period they defeated him no fewer than seven times, not to mention two other contests in which he started but failed to go the distance, with the responsibility for winning or losing passing to the pitchers who relieved him.

And even the fact that he won only three games while losing seven in his last 12 starts against the Pirates does not show the full extent of Root's ineffectiveness. In as many as eight of those 12 games he failed even to go the distance. Only four times did he travel the route against the Bucs in the last three seasons, while on eight occasions he was forced to retire before the finish.

IN 1928 ROOT won one game and lost two in competition with the Freebooters. In 1929 he won one and lost two and was lifted from one other game which he started. Last year he won one and lost three and was driven from the slab in another. Of his last eight games against Pittsburgh he has lost six.

Charley has not beaten the Ensmen since April 28 last year when he won a 7-to-4 decision over Glenn Spencer. In his last four starts against them in championship games he has been knocked out every time, being charged with three defeats in a row while a relief hurler saved the fourth.

SMITH HAS BEEN equally unsuccessful against Pittsburgh, though it must be admitted he had a weak club behind him in former years. There was a time when Bob appeared to have the Bucs' number, and as late as 1928 he beat them three times in succession, but in the last two seasons they defeated him seven times while losing to him only twice. In the last three campaigns they have downed him 10 times in 15 games, and in the last four years they have taken him for 13 out of 19. So it would appear that Hornsby is defying fate and that the selection of either Root or Smith to pitch against them next Tuesday is not going to make the Pirates' chances in the opener look hopeless by any means. They would seem to have less to fear than if one of the other Bruin chuckers were to get the starting assignment.

Joe Judge

WHEN REMARKABLE VETERANS who refuse to be shaken loose from their big league jobs are being discussed, Joe Judge, Washington's first baseman, cannot be overlooked. He will be 37 on May 25, but he's all set to start another season at his old post next week despite reports that he was about done.

Fearing that Judge could not last much longer, the Washington club has spent more than $100,000 in the last few years for new first basemen. The latest was Joe Kuhel, bought from Kansas City last year for $65,000. But every time the management tried to put a new man on the job Judge rose to the occasion, outshone the recruit and held on to the berth.

IN ADDITION TO showing that a man of his experience, even if he is a little brittle, is more valuable in a hot pennant fight than Kuhel or any other youngster, Joe has continued to click the old agate in impressive style.

Far from falling off in his hitting last season he turned in the second best average he has ever made, .326. Only twice in the last 11 years has he fallen below the .300 mark. He will hardly realize his ambition to put in 20 years at first base for the Senators, but with 15 to his credit he has already made a record quite a bit beyond the ordinary.

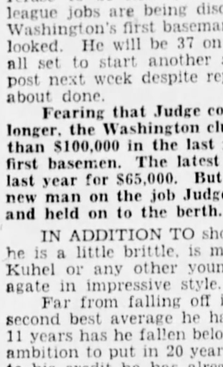
NOTRE DAME has done the expected and the logical thing in naming Heartley (Hunk) Anderson head football coach for next season, with Jack Chevigny as his assistant. Filling Knute Rockne's place was, of course, out of the question, as there are no more Rocknes in existence, so the next best thing to do is to carry on with the men who know more than anybody else about the football situation at the school as he left it, and more than anybody else about what he had planned for 1931—the two who were his aides and confidantes. Steps for 1932 must necessarily depend on developments, but for one season, at least, the appointment of Anderson to this toughest of all football spots, with Chevigny to assist him, looks like the right move.

THE APPROACH OF opening day brings the usual story about the major league holdouts. There was a swarm of them in evidence a few weeks ago, but today the original group has dwindled to an individual. Chick Hafey, Cardinal outfielder, is the only player still on the outside, and it's a safe guess that he'll be in eventually.

Hafey was left playing a lone hand when Phil Collins, Philly pitcher, signed a Quaker contract for two years, and Moe Berg, White Sox catcher, was sold to the Indians, consenting to join that club at once. With three catchers available in Henline, Tate and Grube, the White Sox owners figured they could better afford to part with Berg than to give in to him.

JACK (KID) BERG did only what the great majority of fight fans had anticipated when he retained the junior welterweight championship by winning the decision over Billy Wallace, Cleveland challenger, in their bout at Detroit last night. The titleholder had appeared to hold a clear edge in advance.

There is no doubt that Berg is superior to any of the men now fighting at near 140 pounds. Whether he can be equally successful against Tony Canzoneri for the lightweight title at Chicago on April 24, when he will have to come down to 135 pounds, is another question. He scaled only 138 for last night's fight, but taking off three pounds may cost him more than he can spare.



Chuck Gardner

WHETHER CHICAGO'S BLACKHAWKS, with Chuck Gardner keeping up his brilliant work at goal, win the Stanley Cup by scoring the one more victory they need tonight or Tuesday night in Montreal, or Les Canadiens capture the famous trophy by taking the final two games, the series is bound to add something to hockey's unusual happenings. If the Blackhawks are victorious it will be the first time Chicago has ever won the cup and only the fourth time it has come to this side of the Canadian border, while if Les Canadiens land on top they will be the first team to take the trophy twice in succession in almost 20 years, or since Ottawa won it three times in a row in 1911-12-13.

JACK CHEVIGNY GETS JOB AS ASSISTANT

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 11.—(AP.)—Heartley (Hunk) Anderson has been drafted into football's toughest job—coach of the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame.

Anderson, first a player for the late Knute Rockne, then an assistant to the Wizard of Notre Dame, yesterday named to direct the 1931 squad, with Jack Chevigny second in command, will not however, have the title of "head" coach. He will be "senior" coach.

The title of head coach forever belongs to Rockne, Father Charles L. O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of the university, said in making the announcement yesterday.

"There will never be any head coach but Rockne at Notre Dame," he said. "Anderson will be in charge, but he will be the senior coach and Jack Chevigny the junior coach. Knute Rockne cannot be displaced as head coach."

STARRED AT GUARD

Anderson came to Notre Dame from Calumet, Mich., and played at guard for Rockne in 1919, 1920 and 1921. He was a great lineman and when he was graduated in 1922, became Rockne's line coach. He remained at Notre Dame until the 1928 season when he went to St. Louis University to become head coach.

He coached at St. Louis in 1928 and 1929, but returned to assist Rockne when Tom Lieb left Notre Dame to coach at Loyola of California.

He was credited with having developed the sturdy 1930 Irish line, particularly in reserve power, and was regarded by Rockne as a great line instructor.

Chevigny also was a star for Rockne. He was a member of the 1926, 1927 and 1928 squads and played regularly in his last season at right halfback. He was noted for his blocking and defensive ability.

SPRING WORK RESUMED

The spirit of "carry on" for Rockne has enveloped Notre Dame. Spring practice was resumed yesterday on a volunteer basis. No one had to come out, but every one of the 320 candidates who reported to Rockne before his tragic death last week, was on the field.

Every bulletin board on the campus and in the athletic dressing rooms bore placards reading "carry on," and the spirit was manifest in the grim earnestness of the candidates.

It is expected that a director of athletics will be obtained to handle the administrative tasks, but no announcement as to who is under consideration was forthcoming. Jesse Harper, Rockne's predecessor and coach, has been reported as the most likely prospect.

Oklahoma Retains A. A. U. Mat Title

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 11.—(AP.)—Oklahoma A. and M. College retained its unofficial title of amateur wrestling headquarters of the United States last night. All of its finalists came through in the national A. A. U. tournament for a total of four championships.

Jack Van Bebber, three-year intercollegiate champion, successfully defended his A. A. U. title in the 165-pound class by throwing Merrill Marshall, of Michigan State College, after 6 minutes and 41 seconds of gruelling wrestling.

SPORT SHORTS

PHILADELPHIA. — (AP.) — Robert L. Johnson, Indian outfielder, has been released to the Portland (Ore.) club of the Pacific Coast League by the Philadelphia Athletics. He was sent to Portland for more experience, it was announced. Pitcher Alfred Mahon, whose home address is Pilger, Neb., was unconditionally released. He was with the Allentown (Pa.) club last year.

BETHLEHEM, Pa.—(AP.)—Elvin Reimer, of Nazareth, a forward, yesterday was elected captain of the Moravian College basketball team.

BOWIE, Md.—(AP.)—Morheart, speedy filly by Morvich and Girl o' My Heart, carried J. A. Coburn's silks to an easy triumph in the Blossom Purse, a 5½-furlong dash, here yesterday. Morheart won by three lengths from Burva, which barely beat out Anchor Light for the place.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—A team of American amateur boxers will go abroad next September to compete in five European countries and repay the visits the foreign delegations have been making to the United States for several years.

WASHINGTON, Pa.—Paul (Buck) Jones, of Eighty-four, former Wash-Jeff athlete, has given up his position as assistant coach at California High School to become physical director at Forest Hills Junior High School, Wilkinsburg.

GREENSBURG, Pa.—The Drum and Bugle Corps of the local American Legion will hold its next amateur boxing show in the Coliseum rink here Monday night, April 27, according to an announcement. Boxers from several new clubs and some from those of the Pittsburgh district will be asked to participate.

GREENSBORO, N. C.—Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, and Peggy Watties, Buffalo, N. Y., will battle over the Sedgefield course today for the championship of the club's annual Dogwood women's golf tournament.

SALT LAKE CITY.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight champion, left last night for Reno, Nev., saying he intended to rest there for six weeks. He arrived from Chicago and spent eight hours at the home of his mother, Mrs. Cecelia Dempsey, before continuing his journey.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—The executive committee of the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League failed at a special meeting last night to withdraw its rule barring coaches from the bench during games. The meeting was called as the result of protests from captains of league teams against the rule.

FRENCH MAY FACE BRUINS TUESDAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, April 11.—Members of the Pittsburgh and Detroit clubs were extremely anxious for diamond action today in view of the rain cancelation of yesterday. Jewel Ens and Bucky Harris, rival pilots, were expecting to show off their clubs before big audiences, weather permitting.

Remy Kremer or Charley Wood will be on the mound for the Pittsburghers in the game today. The Bengals may go to their task behind the southpaw shots of Earl Whitehill.

Skipper Ens was comforted today over a report he received from the club medicos on Pitcher Ervin Brame, tall Kentuckian, who had been slated as the favorite for the firing line in Chicago in the opening game. Brame contracted a heavy cold in the latter phases of the long jaunt eastward, but he seems to have thrown off some of the malady here.

HURLER IN DOUBT

Ens, however, is not altogether positive concerning the opening day pitcher. A young lefthander named Larry French appeared so impressive against a galaxy of Detroit batters Thursday in Decatur that Ens has revised his early conjectures in an important way. In other words, there is a chance that Larry will draw the slab slip for the inaugural with the Bruins.

French pitched six rounds against Harris' righthanded attack and allowed only three hits and one run. The aggressive one was late in reporting, owing to holdout troubles, but after he did reach camp, he at once became one of the hardest workers.

In any event the Pirate sharpshooter for the initial championship fracas is much in doubt. The pilot may not make up his mind definitely until the day of the game or perhaps the day before the bell rings.

ROOT CUB CHOICE

Manager Hornsby, of the Cubs, may call upon Charley Root, de luxe righthander, in the jump-off shindig. Root is a classy pitcher in many ways, yet Charley has found the Pirates a bad gang, especially when the Waner boys are in operation, and the brothers doubtless will be right up around the top of the Pittsburgh battle front in the important engagement.

Root can twirl, so far as the Freebooters are concerned; in fact, they would rather prefer to have him out there, although the Ensmen do not scare at any of the crack flingers bossed by the Ra,ah.

The Pirates will be in their new battle raimnent when they clash with the Bengals this afternoon. The gray traveling uniforms are at the clubhouse here and they will be broken in.

SOCCER CUP GAME TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

This afternoon, at the Westinghouse High School Stadium, the Celtics and Pierpoints clash to decide which shall meet Clan Douglas in the final of the Nied Cup. Pierpoints and Celtics are old rivals, and the fans will see one of the hardest fought games of the season.

Tomorrow afternoon, two semi-final games in the spring tourney for junior clubs will be played. At 1:30 the Heidelberg team meets Shannon at Bridgemont, and at Shannon, Mollenauer meets Horning.

In the Keystone League, Morgan will endeavor to cinch the title by beating Dunlevy. This game will be played at Husher Field, Monessen. At Bridgeville, Shannon Fintex and Bridgeville will meet.

An exhibition battle will be staged at Curry tomorrow with the German Sport Club meeting Curry, Simpson will officiate.

Local Polo League Ends Play Tonight

The curtain will be rung down on the Pittsburgh Polo League indoor season at the Hunt Armory tonight, provided the 308th Cavalary team wins its game with the Vangs, as seems assured, since the Vangs have lost all five of their league games to date. A defeat for the Cavalry outfit will drop it into a tie with 107th Field Artillery, with four victories and two defeats each, necessitating a playoff.

Shady Side Academy, the other league member, broke even on the season's play, with three wins against as many losses.

BERG RETAINS TITLE

Sport Vignettes

Rapid has been the rise of Bob Graham, the new professional at the Schenley Park public links . . . . Here it is 1931, and it was only back in 1922 that Bob came to this country from Belfast, Ireland, to seek fame and fortune . . . . He came as a soccer player more than a golfer and played with the Garfield United and Clan McPherson teams in the old Scottish Clan League and then with the Pittsburgh Rovers in the District League and was active in soccer up to three years ago. . . . He played center halfback and was one of the best players in the district, being of the vigorous, robust type. . . . As a golfer, Bob is a terrific, if somewhat erratic, driver. . . . He weighs more than 200 pounds and is tall, and when he hits 'em they remain hit. . . . There is nothing strange about Bob Graham being up there in a golfing way . . . A brother, John, is president of the South Hills Country Club and former president of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association and a fine player; another brother, James, is playing the game back in Belfast; Brother Alex is a pro in the South, and Brother Sam, now dead, was one of the best of the local public links players. Charles, another brother, is dead, and a sister, Betty, is visiting in Belfast. . . . Of a happy disposition, Bob has the makings of a popular and capable professional at the city's free course, and he has an army of friends pulling for him to get off to a fine start.

Bob Graham

Perhaps you didn't know it, but Johnny Reed, Scott High School coach, who piloted his basketball team to the state title, finds his troubles just beginning . . . His baseball team is preparing to defend its W. P. I. A. L. title, which it has won the last two years, and the outlook is none too good, with a number of last year's stars missing from the ranks . . . Spring football practice also is on the program for Reed . . . Otherwise he is enjoying a quiet spring . . . A new athletic schedule will go into effect at Haverford (Pa.) College next Saturday, which, it is expected, may become a model for small colleges . . . A cricket match with a British officers' team, a baseball game with West Point and a track meet with Johns Hopkins are booked to inaugurate the plan . . . Stanley Phillips, former North Side southpaw amateur boxer, now is engaged in the oil business in Texas and is the proud parent of a son and boxing director of the new Langhorn Athletic Club, at San Antonio.

The W. P. I. A. L. baseball season gets under way next Friday with the teams divided into five sections, only a comparatively small number of the schools having teams in the field . . . The local scholastic league pries off the lid next Tuesday, with games scheduled in both the senior and junior divisions . . . The dog days are here for a fact, kennel club shows being scheduled at Washington, Pa., next Tuesday and Wednesday and at Motor Square Garden on Friday and Saturday . . . Wonder if the dogs will object to following the rasslers into the Garden?

One of the best of the younger heavyweights is Terry Mitchell, of Boston, claimant of the New England championship (guess he never heard of a guy named Jack Sharkey, who lives there?) . . . He recently defeated Big Boy Rawson, who had been knocking a lot of talent kicking . . . Bill Coleman, star lefthand pitcher of the old P. A. C.'s, of more than a quarter of a century ago, who is located in New York, is a visitor in town.

—HARRY KECK.

RUNNERS SET FOR GRIND

A field of 29 runners was scheduled to go to the starting line at 1 p. m. today in the annual full-distance marathon race for the championship of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U.

Willam Von Kaenel, last year's winner, will not defend his laurels, having moved to California, where he now is running under the colors of the Los Angeles A. C.

The start and finish will be at Boulevard of the Allies and Ferry street, and the race will be over the Pittsburgh course, to Sewickley and return, a grind of 26 miles 385 yards.

Eddie Roche, of the P. A. A., former cross-country captain at Columbia University, is the favorite to win. The entry list and numbers of the contestants:

Maryland X-Country Race Season Opens

BALTIMORE, April 11.—(AP.) — The Maryland cross-country racing season opens today and 34 jumpers have been nominated for the three initial events.

The races are the My Lady's Manor point-to-point, which will see its twenty-third renewal; the Right Royal Cup, to be run for the sixth time, and the tenth running of the John Rush Streett Memorial steeplechase.

Canadiens, 'Hawks Clash for Title

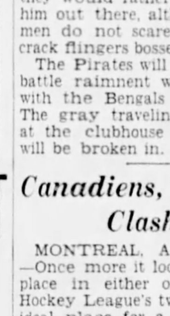
MONTREAL, April 11.—(AP.) —Once more it looks as if second place in either of the National Hockey League's two groups is the ideal place for a team to finish in order to capture the Stanley Cup and the world professional championship.

The Montreal Canadiens, who went from second place to a victory in the playoffs for the historic trophy last year, will find themselves with their backs to the wall tonight as they face the Chicago Blackhawks in the fourth game of the 1931 final series. The Blackhawks, who finished second in the American division, are one game ahead, needing only one more victory to win the cup, and are strongly favored to capture it tonight.

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

BALTIMORE, April 11.—I like Al Simmons' system. He trains away from the team and comes back just in time to sign for $30,000. Next spring I am going to make Griff let me train for seven weeks in Havana. By the time I report back for duty I will feel like a million dollars but will compromise on a $50,000 contract. It's funny I never thought of that before.



Nick Altrock

I see the opening game in Chicago is sold out. They are feeling the effects of the election already. Because when the Cubs can draw 45,000 people on a Tuesday afternoon it means all the gunmen are loafing.

We haven't had a 45,000 crowd in Washington since Lindbergh came back from Paris and Griff didn't get a cut on those receipts.

CARRICK AND DUQUESNE LEAD IN SWIM MEET

FOUR RECORDS ESTABLISHED BY TANKERS

By JESS CARVER

With 10 schools in the battle for the team trophy, the seventeenth annual two-day University of Pittsburgh interscholastic and university swimming championships will be brought to a close in Trees pool this afternoon.

Last night as the annual splashing convention was inaugurated, four records went by the boards and 10 schools either scored points or qualified for the five finals booked for today. Carrick High of Pittsburgh and Duquesne strode forward in no uncertain fashion to take the lead in the scoring and to place the championship, won last year by Erie Central, in great jeopardy. Carrick won the lead with 11 points, closely followed by Duquesne with 10. The champions, Erie Central, pulled up third with eight.

VISITORS LEAD

McKinley High, of Canton, and Erie, however, led in the placing of qualifiers on the lists for the finals, each getting four places in the trials. Westinghouse, Peabody, Clairton, Carrick, South Hills, Munhall and Duquesne placed two men each.

Three of the four records set last night occurred in scholastic events. In the 100-yard free style, Denny, of Westinghouse, who also qualified in the 40-yard event, cut through the water in 56 5-10 seconds, erasing the old mark of 57 set in 1929 by Norton, of the 100-yard breast stroke. Jenkins, of Erie Central, set a new standard of 1:11 9-10. The old mark was held by Schmieler, of Carrick, 1:12 1-5, and was set last year.

Mattis, also of Erie, was too tough for the boys in the third heat of the 100-yard back stroke. His time of 1:05 was one and three-fifth seconds better than that established three years ago by Stanton, of Schenley.

The fourth record came in the university 200-yard breast stroke. Joe Schmieler, the former Carrick luminary, and a member of the famous Schmieler family of tankmen, was clocked in 2:41 4-5. Jackson had set the previous mark in 1927, 2:45 3-5.

DUKES WIN RELAY

Duquesne's crack team won the scholastic 160-yard relay from Erie Central. Stinner, Brodi, Lupes and Radakovich swam in the order named for the winners. Carrick was third and Peabody fourth. The time was 1:23 1-5.

Johnston, of Carrick, exhibited fine form in winning the fancy diving honors. Grant, of South Hills, was second; Green, of Allerdice, third, and Moore, of Canton McKinley, fourth.

Denny, of Westinghouse, qualified in two events. He won his heat and set a record in the 100-yard free style, and then returned to the tank to capture the first heat of the 40-yard free style. He made the best time of the race, 0:20 1-5. This chap may be the lad to annex the individual honors of the meet. The summaries:

ROCKNE'S LIFE STORY—TENTH INSTALMENT.

By WARREN BROWN

(Copyright, 1931, Chicago Herald and Examiner. Distributed by Universal Service.)

Earlier in this narrative, mention was made of the fact that Rockne never had much enthusiasm for basketball.

He never gave any reason beyond the lack of a sense of humor on the part of its coaches.

He couldn't very well have charged its participants, especially the players, with that same lack of humor. For that would have clouded the memory of the Victory Five whose awful deeds are still related at Notre Dame, where George Keogan has placed basketball on a firm basis, averaging up as well as the teams of any other institution, year in and year out.

Knute Rockne

The Victory Five was at large during 1920 and 1921.

For the purpose of the story, its chief actors were Roger Kiley, Harry Mehre, Mickey Kane, Arthur Garvey and Eddie Anderson.

After listening to stories of their deeds—omissions might be the better word—I was moved to ask some of them why they ever were moved to take up the game.

Invariably the answer was the same:

"Oh, Rock told us to. He said we should have a general interest in sports."

This is to be no attempt to list, chronologically, the incidents of the Victory Five's history. Suffice it to say that in one season the team won five games and lost 13, and in the next grew more ambitious, took in more territory, and won six, but lost 15.

"I've often thought," says Mehre, "that the hardest task ever assigned to any student at Notre Dame came the way of the fellow who had to write our season's review for the school publication, and make the season look as if we had accomplished something."

ROCK TRIES PEP TALK

Gus Dorais was basketball coach part of the time, but when Gus took sick, Rockne stepped into the breach.

"He gave us one pep talk," says Mehre, "and that was between halves of a game, in which we were, as usual, very much outclassed."

"Forget about this basketball stuff," Rockne charged his men, "and go out there and play good, hard football. That's all you know, anyhow."

The Victory Five were stylists, in their own peculiar way. I suspect that their theory of basketball was that the game really should be nothing more than a good, old-fashioned rough house. The Victory Five averaged 190 pounds, and did whatever practicing was required, in the old gymnasium, which had a dirt floor, at that time.

"We worked under conditions that might have been considered difficult for anyone else," Kiley says. "The track team and the baseball team would be working out in the same gym. Sprinters would whiz by us, just as we were in the midst of some of our peculiar strategical gyrations. More than once a shot putter left his mark on one of us. Not that one more mark made any great difference.

"When we played away from home, we had to appear on hardwood courts, and when one of these sort of games impended, Rock sent us downtown to play the high school team, which had a hardwood court. They were little fellows, and they not only could hide behind us, but did.

'JUST PRACTICE'

"They were giving us a terrible trimming, when we decided to put up the front that, after all, we were just down there practicing, and weren't especially interested in the result of the game. I doubt if we fooled them, but we felt less foolish, ourselves."

There came a game in the career of the Victory Five, one of the few which they threatened to win.

The score was very close, one point separating the two teams, with but a few seconds to go, the Victory Five trailing, of course, when a foul was called against the opposition.

Then came the problem. Who was going to try to make the free throw.

Mehre, who was captain, offered the ball to Kiley. Kiley looked the other way. The ball was offered to Anderson. He wasn't interested. Neither was Kane, and no more Garvey. So the gallant captain stepped up to the free throw line, aimed, fired—and caged the ball, as the regulation game ended.

"We were inspired," says Kiley, "and crowded round our captain. We didn't need any pep talk. We knew that we had those fellows on the run, and would go out in the overtime period, and give them a beating."

When the overtime period was ended, the enemy had acquired 15 points.

Rockne, as might have been suspected, gave the Victory Five back to circulation, as soon as possible.

Later it was coached by Walter Halas, who appears to have been as much a character as the "Victory Five's" own personnel.

When the Victory Five happened to reach some collegiate town for a game and arrived in the afternoon, Halas would caution the players to lie down, and rest.

"But don't close your eyes," he insisted.

"He used to have a terrible time waking us up at 7:30 to go out and play the ball game," concludes Mehre.

ONE ON HARVARD

If Rockne didn't enthuse over the Victory Five or, for that matter, any basketball players who came after them, he had plenty of contacts with them, in football.

And the same group accompanied the football team, in 1921, when it was scheduled to play Army and Rutgers, with but three days separating the games.

This game marked the first official visit of a Rockne team to New York, it being necessary to break the jump from West Point to Rutgers by stopping overnight in Manhattan.

"We got off the train," related Mehre, "and were all set for a ride in real taxicabs. But Rock beat us to it.

"He had a whole pocketful of nickels, and pulled them out.

"'No, no cabs,' he said. 'A lot of the boys have never ridden in the subway, and this is a fine chance.'

"We rode in the subway, to the Pennsylvania Hotel, and it was all pretty swell, I tell you.

"When we came down in the morning for breakfast, and filed into the dining room, the head waiter bowed, and waved us to a table that was set with the most appetizing array of training food we had ever seen. This, then, was the big league, and we sat down and made the most of it.

"It was slightly disconcerting to discover, just about the time we had finished, that a mistake had been made. It seems the Harvard boys were also stopping at the Hotel, and it was their food, not ours, that we had consumed so avidly."

KISER SCORES WIN OVER BRANNON

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

Ray Kiser, of Tulsa, Okla., proved once again to a Pittsburgh fight crowd, at the Moose Temple, last night, that he is a tough hombre as he outfought rugged Eddie Brannon, local Negro, in a slugging bee in the 10-round windup. Brannon won the first round, in which he opened a cut on Kiser's left eye which had to be passed upon by the commission physician when he went to his corner, and had a shade in the fifth, but he could gain only an even break in two others and lost the other six.

It was a rough battle that enthused the fans, and Kiser's battering infighting tactics carried the night for him. His two-fisted punching rattled off Brannon's body and head too rapidly for the local entry to keep up with him.

There were no knockdowns. Brannon, at 137½ pounds, had a weight edge of one-half pound at 3 p. m.

GORNICK WINS AGAIN

Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, 138, boxed one of his best bouts to tame dangerous Howard Mitchell, 138½, a tall, rangy, free-swinging puncher, of Cincinnati, with a knockout record, all of the way in the six-round semi-final. Steve Senich, of Homestead, 129½, outfought Don Frazier, Negro, of the Hill, 128¼, in the second bout, and Carl Montebano, of Braddock, 159½, won by a technical knockout over Carl Cesko, of Uniontown, 161½, in the fifth round of the opener, when Referee Red Robinson halted the bout because of a cut on Cesko's left eye. Cesko, a crude, hard swinger, was outclassed and was down for four in the first round and for nine in the third and groggy most of the way, and the fight should have been stopped long before he was cut and spent.

Frank Brown and Frank Hogan were the judges, Tommy Grant and A. C. Couch the timers, Ray Eberle the announcer and Dr. M. R. Goldman the commission doctor.

SILVERS BOUT IN DOUBT

Due to a conflict in dates caused by the manager of Pal Silvers, New York middleweight, the latter's return bout with Joe Walters, of Springfield, O., set for next Friday night at the Moose, is up in the air. Developments are expected today. Last night's crowd was only fair in size.

Between Rounds

The Tiger Joe Randall-Jimmy Belmont bout at McKeesport next Thursday night will be the second meeting between the pair. They first fought in a main bout at Motor Square Garden, Christmas afternoon, 1929, with Randall winning the decision. They have been rematched three times for McKeesport in recent weeks, the first two pairings falling through, first Randall and then Belmont suffering an injured hand. It's getting to be almost a Jackie Rodgers-Johnny Datto affair for postponements.

The Boys' Club, of Pittsburgh, boxing team will meet the Y. M. H. A. team Thursday at the Y gym. Phil Goldstein, Y. M. H. A. boxing instructor, has arranged six bouts, as follows, the first named being Y boxers: P. Goldstein vs. Stanley Kelly, Joe Krovitz vs. Schridder, Jack Grossman vs. Bob McIntyre, Morris Rosenbloom vs. Al DeVall, Charles Teis vs. Moon Higgins and Bernie Sloane vs. Howard Kearns.

Both Midget Wolgast, flyweight championship claimant, and Archie Bell, of New York, will arrive in town early tomorrow for their 10-round main bout in the Motor Square Garden ring Monday night. They will work out lightly in local gyms in the afternoon.

Downtown Y Team Seeks W. Pa. Title

ALTOONA, Pa., April 11.—Teams from the Pittsburgh Downtown Branch, Tarentum, Clearfield, Wilmerding, Altoona and Oil City are competing in the annual Western Pennsylvania Y. M. C. A. volleyball championship tournament here today. The winner and runnerup will qualify to compete in the state championship at Pittsburgh, April 25.

Carrick, Allegheny Gain Final Round

Carrick and Allegheny clash next Tuesday for the senior scholastic volleyball championship of the city. Yesterday, Carrick annexed the title in Section I by defeating Fifth Avenue, 15-11 and 15-12. Allegheny won out in Section II, downing Connelley, 15-10 and 15-5.

In the junior division, Fifth Avenue won in Section I, 15-13 and 15-10, and in Section II, Herron Hill defeated Latimer, 15-5, 4-15 and 15-9.

P. T. A. AGAIN ELECTS DAVIS PRESIDENT

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

J. Phillips Davis, former Carnegie Tech and Stanton Heights racquet ace and present University Club representative, will serve another term as president of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association.

Davis was re-elected head of the organization by unanimous vote of delegates from no less than 13 affiliated clubs at the annual spring meeting of the P. T. A. at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association clubhouse last evening.

Along with him were retained in office his colleagues of his initial regime: Frank S. Smith, Edgewood, first vice president; Austin Famariss, College Avenue, second vice president; J. D. Mattern, University Club, treasurer, and Paul G. Sullivan, P. A. A., secretary. Davis was likewise chosen Steel City member of the Middle States Lawn Tennis Association Executive Committee.

Likelihood of fresh entries to grace the makeup of Section II of the P. T. A. Inter-Club League was indicated in special report by Chairman Jack Lauler, of the New Teams Committee. Squads from Aspinwall, Neville Island, Sewickley Y. M. C. A., Bellevue and the Rockwood Tennis Club, of Mount Lebanon, loom as strong possibilities. The Rockwood Tennis outfit, under highly capable Hatch-and-Dixon direction, was extended formal invitation to join the secondary loop.

JUNIORS BOOSTED

Last night's session was featured by lengthy discussion of the manifold problems of juvenile tennis development. A motion to revive the Western Pennsylvania Junior and Boys' championships, allowed to lapse into discard when the old P. A. A. rectangles were lost back in 1926, was enthusiastically carried. J. Howard Moore, College Avenue leader and Pittsburgh member of the Middle States Junior Development Committee, was appointed chairman of the West Penn governing group.

The association secretary was reappointed chairman of the Schedule and Sanction Committee, charged with the tasks of drawing up the Inter-Club circuit card, of promulgating new recommendations and regulations regarding the playing of inter-club matches, and of passing upon sanction and dates of all tournaments to be staged under P. T. A. auspices. The question of deciding whether or not Section II of the league will be split into two co-ordinate divisions in case of enlargement to the neighborhood of a dozen arrays and precisely how such split will be cared for, should it be made, has been left to this committee.

PARKS PLAY ASSURED

Assurance that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will again sponsor the Pittsburgh Public Parks Championships, which in 1930 brought out a record entry list of nearly 200 contestants, was contained in a letter from the newspaper to President Davis.

Appointment of a special committee for the purpose of revising and bringing to date the P. T. A. constitution and by-laws, untouched in more than a decade, was provided for by vote of all present when it was discovered that the present code includes no article outlining method of amendment. The redrafting group will be named next week and will bring forward its handiwork either at a special meeting next autumn or at the 1932 annual seance.

The list of club representatives at least evening's meeting follows: J. P. Davis and J. D. Mattern, University Club; Dr. David L. O'Loughlin, J. W. Lauler, J. L. McLain, and Paul G. Sullivan, P. A. A.; J. Howard Moore and Austin Famariss, College Avenue; Neal O. Rumsey, W. W. Parshley and Walter Artzberger, Mt. Lebanon; M. W. Bovard, H. Vernon Porter and Karl Wolfe, Stanton Heights; Thomas Spooner, Westinghouse; C. D. Lyon, West Penn Power; Sam R. Keller, Duquesne Library; Howard E. Campbell, College Hill; R. L. Creighton, South Hills; John Ferrick, Washington Heights; E. D. Seitz, Alpha Kappa Psi.

Martinsburg Club To Be Macks' Farm

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., April 11.—Joe Cambria, Baltimorean, who will operate the Martinsburg-Hagerstown entry in the Middle Atlantic League during the 1931 season, will come to Martinsburg soon for a conference with Earl Mack, a member of the board of strategy of the Philadelphia Athletics, it was learned here today.

Mack, who has been South with the world champions, is due here for a visit en route to Philadelphia. Recently he wrote to this city to the effect that the A's would be only too glad to send young ball players to Martinsburg in the event the Mountaineers secured a franchise in the M. A. circuit.

Cambria and Mack are expected to go into a huddle here about the proposition and the former is also expected to approach the American Leaguer about an exhibition game in Martinsburg with the Athletics.

LOCAL GOLFER FACES DUNLAP IN FINAL

PINEHURST, N. C., April 11.—(AP.)—Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, captain of the University of Pittsburgh golf team, and George T. Dunlap, of New York, intercollegiate champion, will battle today for the title in the final of the thirty-first annual North and South amateur tournament.

Sam Parks

Yesterday, Dunlap, the medalist, a Princeton star, advanced handily at the expense of J. B. Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., who annexed a series of titles in the Florida tournament season. The score was 4 and 3.

PARKS BEATS TAILER

T. Suffern Tailer, Newport, R. I., gave Parks more trouble in their semi-final contest, but the Pennsylvanian played the steadier game on the back nine to win 2 and 1.

Parks and Tailer were all square at the turn, each with a 39. Parks took three putts on the third and was trapped on the sixth to lose both. Tailer was trapped and lost the fifth, but won the sixth with a birdie and the seventh with a par 3. Parks won the eighth and ninth.

Both shot birdies on the tenth, and they reached the twelfth even. Tailer won that hole with a birdie 3, but he lost to Parks, par 4 on the thirteenth and again on the fourteenth. Parks' birdie 4 won the sixteenth after halving the fifteenth in par.

Tailer was two feet from the cup for a win on the seventeenth when Parks laid him a stymie, to gain a half in 4, and end the match, 2 and 1.

WOOD SEEKS SPEED MARK

MIAMI, Fla., April 11.—(AP.)—Intimation was given here that Gar Wood, Detroit motorboat enthusiast, may send his broad-beamed Miss America IX roaring over the measured mile course in Indian Creek here today in an attempt to regain the world's speedboat record.

With an announcement from Otis Porter, timer for the American Automobile Association, that electrical timing apparatus would be in place by morning, Wood ordered his mechanics to be ready to put the Miss America in the water at noon.

Helene Madison Sets New Swim Record

CLEVELAND, April 11.—(AP.)—Helene Madison, 16, of the Washington Athletic Club, added another mark to her list of swimming achievements last night at the Cleveland Athletic Club, when she streaked to a new American free style record for 100 meters in 1:07.1.

This was 3.5 seconds faster than the time made by Ethel Lackie, the record holder.

While the time will not be recognized as a world's record because it was established in a 60-foot pool, the Seattle girl made the distance nine-tenths of a second faster than Martha Norelius' recognized world record.

Vines and Barnes Gain Tennis Final

HOUSTON, April 11.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines, the lean Californian, and Bruce Barnes, Texas University's ace, drove through to the finals yesterday in the River Oaks Country Club's first invitation tennis tournament, when nearly everybody had expected them to fall.

Vines, seeded third, won in straight sets from the No. 1 seeded player and favorite, Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, 6-3, 6-4, 8-6. Barnes defeated George Lott, of Philadelphia, 1930 Davis Cup player, in a long and lusty battle through five sets finished in the half light of semi-dusk 1-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-5, 6-4.

Huskie, Bear Crews Set for Race Today

OAKLAND, Cal., April 11.—(AP.)—Varsity, jayvee and freshman crews of the Universities of Washington and California were ready for the twenty-eighth annual renewal of the Pacific Coast's leading intercollegiate regatta here today.

More than 20,000 persons were expected to crowd the banks of the Oakland estuary and bleachers erected near the finish line, to see the Bear and Huskie crews sweep down the three-mile course. Both the varsity and jayvee races will be over the three-mile distance for which the record of 15 minutes 9 seconds was set by Washington. The freshmen will row only two miles.

BOWIE MUTUELS

DryLand Cranberry

Cranberries grow in bogs or swamps, but there is a species of high bush cranberry which is edible, and which will thrive in dryer locations.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Should a Wife Stay With Unfortunate Hubby?

Ethel thought she should. And proceeded to act on her hunch. As long as things were lovely with Tom, she stayed around. But when things went wrong . . . when Tom lost his job and they had to give up their pretty little bungalow . . . she grabbed Junior and went "back home for a little vacation."

Action Is Disapproved

For a little while her absence seemed a real help to struggling Tom, and everyone thought she had done a sensible thing. But —after she'd been home for a while, taking things easy (while poor Tom, out on the firing line, took the hard knocks), she began to wonder why she should go back to him at all.

"Why should I face all that trouble again?" she asked. "We can stay right here and dad will take care of us and junior will be safe. Isn't that right—to do the thing that's best for junior?"

Maybe you thought she was right. Maybe you thought she'd be foolish to go back to the struggle with her young husband when she could stay where she was and take it easy.

But the idea makes Edith go on the warpath. "I hope none of my daughters grow up to be quitters like that!" she snorts.

"Honestly, I have never written to a newspaper before, but Ethel's letter made me so mad I just can't help saying what I think. I am so 'all het up' I could walk the floor and tear my hair! I could even start preaching, if I had anyone to listen to me.

"What a wonderful mother that girl is . . . I don't think! And poor Tom! Can you imagine picking such a wife, as she turned out to be, to help him sail his life's boat! What a sailor she proved . . . deserting the ship when it struck the first foul breeze!

A Selfish Act

"And then kidding herself she's doing it for the baby. Huh —so she's doing it all for him, is she? Well, she doesn't fool me any. She's doing it for little Ethel and nobody else. She's a lazy, quitting piker. It's her own selfish self she's thinking of. If she goes home to mother she won't have to wear her mind out worrying, or her fingers working.

"Tom loves that baby just as much as she does. What right has she to take it away from him? None, if you ask me. And the baby has a right to its father, too. She is robbing both of them . . . just because she's a lazy little selfish soul.

"And don't think that I don't know what I am talking about, either. I have been married 10 years myself, and I certainly have had my share of ups and downs—but I have never run away from any of them yet, and I don't intend to. I am ready to meet whatever comes. I'll just look Old Man Trouble in the face when he comes 'round here knocking at my door. And I'll stick to this man o' mine, through thick and thin, and that's that. He isn't working just now, and hasn't been for some time—and I should quit him for that, should I? I should say not!

"Of course, I guess Ethel's dad and mother are to blame for part of her foolishness. That's the 'only child' for you. They always coddle 'em! Well, if one of my daughters ever comes home like that, I'll send her packing. Ethel's dad and mother are too easy, just merely 'advising' her to go back to Tom. Just turn this thing around. If this 'wonderful wife' had been the one to fall down a little, and Tom had left her like that . . . what a mean man he'd be called!

Advises Return

"Ethel, you had better pick up and go back to that husband of yours, and that quickly before he finds out what a piker you really turned out to be, and decides he doesn't want you after all.

"Think it over, Sister. You think you've been doing some thinking already, but you haven't. Now get busy. It will do you good to do some real thinking . . . and then some real acting . . . acting like a real woman, instead of just a spoiled kid. If you think what you're planning on doing is the right thing—well, all I've got to say is, I wouldn't be caught at it!

"I could say a lot more. I'm so mad! So ashamed that one of my sex would act like that, and then try to excuse herself! But I won't. It might burn up this paper if I did."

I guess that's handing it out straight!

And are you giving a big "hurrah" for Edith's side . . . or do you think that Ethel was right?

If your husband was in a jam . . . if he were a good, faithful plodder, honest and conscientious, but not likely to ever be a big time success . . . and if he'd got down on his luck, would you go back to him when things got better . . . or would you stay in dad's well-feathered nest?

'The Fashions That Bloom in the Spring

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Nature's spring-time is always alike, one spring never less lavish and gay than another. Always crocus, daffodil, very blue skies, warm rains, robins, blue-birds, sand-lilies and wild yellow violets in the West, the shy bloom on the sage and vanishing dream of purple desert flowers, in the East primrose and violet and fruitbloom. With LOVE wading around in it all, shouting for ecstasy! Nature's spring-time is stable, as unchanging in its charm and singing color as is the moon in its place. Nice. Nice for the one who remembers to look up from the pavement or the road at the world around him, often enough to get a fresh drink for his soul, a new coat of paint for his shabby spirit! Nice that nature's spring doesn't go modernistic or some such!

But fashion's spring is another thing. That Lady never keeps of one mind long enough to feel that her clothes are OLD clothes—and therefore old friends. Every spring is another kind of a spring to HER. Last year's was just so-so for color or freshness. Nothing to gambol on the green about. Others before have had surprises to offer, or maybe just the same clothes with a new belt or a button for our excitement!

But this spring!! Fashion has been busy on a NEW picture for Aprilly showing—a new pallette—gayety in line and color. Feminine and floral; like a French flower-garden! That's the surprising parade of things to wear beginning this spring. It's going to be a lot of fun wearing clothes from this April on, girls! Eyelet-hole embroidery frocks. Starched gauzes. Lace and more lace—in tender pastel colors. Lace repeated in pajamas—PYGamas —for parties. Jackets. JACKETS. Bed jackets. Suit jackets. Velvet Grandma jackets. Bolero jackets. Evening jackets. Butterfly-bow ties of taffeta and chiffon. Patent-leather ginger-bread—that is to say, shoes, belts, ribbons, bags, hats. Flowered chiffon and black velvet. White and black organdie. Ruffles. Ruffled vests. Just-over-the-elbow-sleeves with fur. Flowered hats. (Would you have believed that possible five years, three, two, years ago?) And her pallette is a rainbow of color.

Madame Fashion is laying it on this year. Her newest is THREE colors where two have been before. Not just black and yellow—or black and red. But black and red and yellow. Or black and pink and green. Or three variations of the same color. Copper and gold and canary. Dark blue, powder blue and mist. Black-red, American beauty and pink.

And then there's black—and white! Somehow made to look like April. Fresh, and crisp, and youthful, and so feminine.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Perfect Plan—If Bride And Groom Wish It

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is engaged to my husband's brother, and they are planning to have an informal church wedding. She intends to wear a hat and dress, and he a business suit of dark blue. Is it improper for me to be matron of honor, and my husband best man? They have been told that it is very bad form to have a married woman as matron of honor, and that I should be a bridesmaid. Is this correct? I thought that as long as I am the only sister of the bride-to-be, and my husband the only brother of the groom, it would be nice for us to stand up with them. The bride is not planning to have any bridesmaids or ushers, only the matron of honor and best man. Will you please let us know, as we have had quite a discussion on this?

If this is the plan that most pleases the bride and groom, it is an excellent plan, and thoroughly correct. But let me emphasize that it must be what the bride and groom wish—that is, your sister must want to have you as her matron of honor, and the groom must want to have his brother as his best man.

You see, I am a bit confused by your statement "I thought that it would be nice for us to stand up with them." No one has the right to plan the attendants of the bride and groom, except the bride and groom.

Very often the chief attendent of the bride, or the one attendant if she is to have only one, is a married woman, a matron of honor. This is correct. Indeed, it would seem to me, if the bride and groom wish this arrangement, that it is the perfect plan, especially under this exceptional relationship of the couple and their attendants.

Not Only Bad Manners—But a Form of Cruelty

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know your sentiments along this line. A younger sister, a college graduate, thinks she should correct an older sister who does not speak good English. The older sister made a short visit with her sister and each time her sister made an error in conversation, the younger sister would mention it. What is your opinion?

MRS. P.

Few things are more unfriendly and unattractive than this kind of correction. Indeed it is a form of cruelty that is especially difficult for the person to bear. I'm sorry for the constantly-corrected sister, and I hope that the upstart college-graduate sister will mend her ways, and not feel that she must apply her education so crudely. After all, education isn't only a learning of grammar, but it is also an appreciation of the feelings of others . . . or, at least, it should be.

Veritzen Reveals His Enmity Toward Mary

I had accomplished the apparently impossible! I had put Philip Veritzen in a quandary. Never before had I seen him at a loss for words. But as he listened to my query concerning his attitude toward Colin Cameron's "talkie" role for Mary, if she were as formerly, a potential Veritzen star, he was shaken out of his poise as if it were the shell of a nut popping open and stared—rather—glared—at me with knitted brows and lowering face.

There was a note of finality in his voice that sent a rippling chill down my spine. The softening of his attitude, the air of willingness to be placated which I had fancied were to be seen in his attitude, were distinctly absent at this moment. I suddenly found it a hard task to keep my own face and voice non-committal.

"I am aware of that," I told him, crisply. "That was not my question, if you will pardon me the reminder. I asked you what your attitude would be toward the offer if she were still—in your good graces?"

"Your talents are wasted in any other profession that the legal one," he told me at last, smiling a bit grimly. "As a cross-examiner—permit me to doff my best topper to you."

"You will drag it out, won't you? he countered ruefully, "even though you know the answer already. I have had one unalterable rule through all my training of young women to hold stellar places in my organization. They must never appear in any other capacity upon any stage. I have been false to my own dictum only once, and that, as you remember, was for Miss Mary. I agreed to everlook the fact that she had appeared as the masked dancer, because there was only a chance in a million that anyone beyond our own circle would ever know of it. But this is different. An appearance in a talkie role would effectually spoil the value of a Veritzen star. I could not permit it."

"Thank you," I said, "I really am most grateful to you for answering me so frankly."

"I could do nothing else," he returned, "but—may I venture the opinion that Miss Mary will be making a grave mistake if she does not accept the offer. I am surprised at Cameron's making it to an inexperienced girl. It is a wonderful opportunity for any girl—"

"Save a potential Veritzen star," I interposed slyly, and he laughed ruefully.

"There you have me," he said, but I hardly heard him, for at the other end of the room I saw Dicky framed in the doorway. I had figured that I would have ample time to finish my perfectly innocuous colloquy with Mr. Veritzen before his return with Noel. He must have awakened Noel and dashed downstairs again immediately, leaving the boy to follow at his leisure. And his glowering look at me told me conclusively that he comprehended the ruse I had used to get him away from the dancing room while I talked to Philip Veritzen.

There was but one thing to do, and I did it promptly. Lifting my hand I gave him an imperative signal to come to me, smiling broadly the while. He hesitated for an instant, then walked rapidly across the floor, with a most creditable answering grin.

"Oh, Dicky!" I exclaimed a bit breathlessly as he came up to me. "Mr. Veritzen says I am wasting my talents in any other profession that the legal one, and that I would make a splendid cross-examiner."

My employer played up beautifully.

"You should have heard her pin me down a minute ago. I had to come right out into the open and tell my inmost thoughts."

"Oh, the girl's good!" Dicky averred with a little laugh. "But what's it all about, or can't it be told?"

"That's why I brought you over here," I told him with a little grimace, "if you'll keep quiet for 10 consecutive seconds."

"Shoot!" he retorted, pressing his lips tightly together in ludicrous fashion, and I told him of Colin Cameron's offer to Mary of a talkie role and of Mr. Veritzen's approval of the scheme, and of the question he had just answered. I emphasized the fact—without making it too obvious—that I had had no opportunity to speak to Dicky about the offer since Mary had told me of it, and finished by asking him with apparent guilelessness for his opinion of the offer. I felt quite Machiavellian as I uttered the last words, for I had two distinct ends to serve by that question. I wished to placate Dicky by asking his advice in front of Mr. Veritzen, and I wished to impress my employer with the fact that Dicky, not I, would be ultimately responsible for whatever decision Mary might make about Colin Cameron's offer.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

No woman will be classed with lightness and ease of motion if she is muscle bound, or if her spine is rigid. The body should be held tall, stretched its full length, if it is to move with grace and flexibility. Muscles should be elastic, have a certain amount of resiliency. Daily exercise will put them in form.

The final rinsing of cold water after the shampoo is tonic to the scalp, but gives little benefit unless the scalp is frictioned briskly to produce a reaction of the blood streams. Naturally curly hair hates cold water and should never have it. Instead, after the final rinsing, the head should be held over steam. Tresslocks that have been permanently waved should be treated the same as naturally curly hair.

Neck reform is what the sisterhood needs. There should be a campaign for the study of neckology. One crying need is to let the neck have its share of creams and bleaches instead of giving the entire quota to the complexion. Up and down gullies in the front of the neck and humps of fat on the rear are produced by lack of external attention and by bad posture. You can get both of these horrors by plunging the head forward and the chin down instead of holding the head in a royal manner

Time was when the word cosmetic sent perfect, nervous ladies into a state of shivers and gooseflesh. It sounded like sin. And that's too bad, because it is derived from the word cosmos, which means order or ornament. No reason why it should be kicked around or sneered at. Make-up is included among cosmetics, but so is soap. Powder is a cosmetic that is a protection to the skin, forming a barrier against the ravages of atmospheric dirt, wind and sunlight. So is any creamy emollient that keeps the epidermis from divorcing itself from the home base.

"Sippy Diet" Aids in Treating Gastric Ills

So long as the stomach is in good health and receives the proper nourishment, it functions as the organ of digestion. It will digest meat and other substances placed in its cavity, but never the stomach itself.

Where there occurs a change in the lining of the stomach, the stomach may digest itself. The part digested is the part which is injured. The injury may be due to infection, lowered body health, and various other factors difficult to explain.

Ulcer of the stomach is a condition really due to digestion of a part of the stomach wall. The portion involved is attacked by the juices of the stomach and a small punched out area is actually digested.

This unusual performance on the part of the stomach is seen only in disease. It may continue until there is a perforation of the wall of the stomach, or it may spread lengthwise.

The first condition, in which perforation occurs is spoken of as rupture of the gastric ulcer. This requires immediate operation. The second condition usually becomes chronic and very often can be completely cured by correct diet.

In most cases of stomach ulcer, or "gastric ulcer," as the doctors call it, the taking of food causes pain. The pain is located in the portion of the abdomen just below the ribs. It is promptly relieved by a stomach wash, by vomiting, or by the taking of an alkali. Bicarbonate of soda is commonly used because its marked alkalinity overcomes acidity and gives immediate relief of pain.

Cold and wet, worry, exhaustion, lack of care in diet, any one of these may bring on a sudden attack. Continuous neglect often leads to chronic pain, frequent hemmorrhages from the stomach, and anemia. The victim loses a great deal of weight and becomes markedly anemic and quite emaciated.

One of the effective non-surgical treatments of this condition is the so-called "Sippy diet." This treatment aims to prevent the digestive action of the gastric juice of the stomach upon the ulcerated surface by shielding it from the juice. By feeding the patient small amounts of easily digested food at hourly intervals, and giving alkalies, the ulcer is less exposed to the strong juice.

Gastric ulcer is a condition requiring the utmost care in the feeding. Your doctor will outline the diet and you must strictly adhere to it.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation—you should find quick sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

Should married men flirt with all the nice looking women friends who call at his home, and dance with one of them at the club to the exclusion of all the others? He lets his wife sit out the dances, of course.

No. He shouldn't. But the trouble with him is not that he loves his wife less, but that he loves himself so much. The women he flirts with mean to him only the gratification of his vanity. He is flattered by attention, just as women flirts are flattered.

Any woman, married to such a man, must understand his nature and try to overlook the conceit that makes him behave as he does.

All men are selfish. (Like us.) Take men like her husband, sometimes they are mighty good men in every other way, devoted to their wives, but they must have flattery, and a wife gets a bit tired of applauding them.

You can't change the animal if he's made that way, so the next best thing, if you want to hold on to him, and I take it you do, is to ignore his petty flirtations. Dancing with other women—well, I'd tell him he must show me the courtesy of enough dances to avoid talk about any neglect of me, and then I'd dance with other men and amuse myself. Forget his silly behavior, because from your letter, it doesn't mean he doesn't love you and he isn't in love with any one except you. He just wants all of them to APPRECIATE HOW WONDERFUL HE IS.

I know it's a bit disgusting, but some men have worse faults, ones that make for a lot more misery.

Recently some friends of mine returned from a tour of the world. On their boat was a couple, the man being pretty much like your husband. The wife he adored, and she was an ideal wife for him. He flirted—superficially—with all the ladies and she was amused. Sometimes she got tired and went to her cabin to rest. She'd let him sit on deck till all hours with the much prettier passengers, but never once did she indicate the slightest jealousy. The man adored her and no beautiful woman could get him away from her. He really loved her, but he had to play. It's like children who don't love their mother less because they want more toys. The man wasn't unfaithful, he wasn't mean and not for anything would he hurt his wife. But she understood what he was like and what this playtime did to his nature. It made him happy, and a happy husband is a much greater asset in a home than one who is being spied upon and nagged because he's gay spirited.

When anyone jokes about your husband dancing too often with one of your friends, tell them you are glad he does, and you don't blame him, and if you were a man you'd do the same. They will quit "kidding" you, and you must not be afraid of losing him. You won't if you don't get gloomy about trifles.

If you don't like something he does tell him you don't mind his having a good time but you won't permit him to make you conspicuous. I'm sure he won't. Don't pout, talk it over pleasantly and tell him you want him to have a good time, but there are limits. If, as you say, he really loves you, he will be sorry, but don't put too many restrictions on that kind of man. It frets them and makes them think they want more freedom than they would know what to do with if they had it. Be tolerant.

You can't keep silly women from writing notes to attractive men. She asked why he DIDN'T call her, so you know that he DIDN'T.

Household Hints

When the bedroom floor is to be washed see that it is thoroughly dried and aired before night.

When peeling onions for a relish hold them under the running cold water faucet and it will prevent those tears. Then when you are putting them through the grinder, place a wet cloth over the top of the grinder and work underneath and you will again avoid that sadness.

If you have been asked to stay with a sick person in order to relieve a member of the family, don't feel you must entertain him or her the entire time you are there. Tell him a few things you know will interest him, but by no means keep up a steady conversation. He will ask you for more if he wants it.

Horoscopes

Sunday, April 12

Sunday's horoscope indicates promotion and prosperity for all pertaining to employment, labor, the clergy, and to all manner of scientific or metaphysical preoccupations or vocations. Elderly persons and strangers may figure in affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which definite progress or promotion may be counted upon, with assistance from elders or strangers and with the preferment or recognition of employers. There may be some advantageous change or journey.

A child born on this day should be ingenious and should win the good will and patronage of elders and employers, as well as of strangers. It may have an interesting career and attain substantial position by its own worth and effort.

Monday, April 13

Monday's astrological chart holds testimonies of annoying, uncertain and difficult situations to be encountered. Employment has some minor oppositions, new undertakings hold little promise, and generally there is prospect of difficulty, postponement and frustration. Be careful with funds and safeguard property.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which there may be many difficult and thwarting situations to surmount by resolution, optimism and good judgment. There is sign of delays, annoyances in employment, and jeopardy to funds and to property.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be morose, sullen and melancholly unless given an education encouraging a healthy and optimistic outlook upon life and its affairs.

Josephine Mendez and Raffel Gonzales held in the county jail as material witnesses in the trial of Guadalupe J. Gonzales, 29, of 3000 Carson street, found guilty of voluntary manslaughter, were each $465 richer today by reason of their incarceration.

Gonzales was charged with the murder of Luis Talamantez, of 3006 Carey way, December 30, during a quarrel over the Mendez woman. Sentence was deferred pending a possible appeal. Judge George V. Moore, who handed the two witnesses their vouchers, said:

"This money is paid to you by reason of your stay in jail. You've earned it yourselves and no attorney or interloper is entitled to any part of it."

Witnesses held in jail pending trial are paid by the state at the rate of $5 daily. The two were held in jail 93 days.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad inaugurated a change in passenger service shortly after midnight when through passenger locomotives were changed at the New Castle Junction terminal instead of at Pittsburgh. An additional force of men will be put to work at once for the maintenance and handling of the engines, according to Terminal Trainmaster J. L. Thoman, of New Castle Junction. The new service will be in complete operation Monday, he said.

All locomotives operating between New York, Washington and Chicago will change at the junction terminal without loss of time, it was said. Thoman declared the change would eventually affect the freight service, using the New Castle Junction as the terminal.

LOVE LETTERS DIVORCE BASIS

s. Julia E. Spaulding, of Brookline, found three letters signed "Sweetheart" in her husband's trunk and he admitted to her his attentions to another woman, she told Judge William H. McNaugher at the hearing of her divorce suit against Llewellyn A. Spaulding, now of Boston.

They were married in Wheeling, October 27, 1924, lived in Swissvale avenue, Wilkinsburg, and parted in December, 1926, when Mrs. Spaulding found her husband missing from their home after she returned from a visit of a few days to her mother in Stoyestown, according to her testimony. Previously Spaulding had been absent from home on occasions for a week at a time, she said.

TRINITY GIRLS REHEARSE PLAY

Four hundred members of the Girls Friendly Society of Trinity Cathedral met last night in the Cathedral parish house for the first rehearsal of the play, "Maryland," to be presented May 1 and 23, in the Nixon Theater.

The play will be produced by Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Shea, theatrical directors, of New York. Last night's rehearsal was given to chorus work and tryouts for feminine leads.

Man Convicted, New Death Quiz Planned

AMELIA, Va., April 11.—(AP.)—Richard Lee, Negro farmhand, convicted of first-degree murder late yesterday in Amelia Circuit Court for slaying J. Will ... nes, dairyman, and was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary.

Shortly afterward, Judge Edwin P. Cox, at the request of Commonwealth's attorney, George K. Taylor, ordered a special grand jury "for further investigation of the Jones case." On the witness stand Lee had reiterated the statement that Mrs. Jones offered him $25 to kill her husband, and repudiated a confession he had made.

Auto Kills Woman Returning From Meet

BETHLEHEM, Pa., April 11.—(AP.)—Struck by an automobile when she stepped in front of her car, Mrs. Florence Beck, 43, wife of Dr. S. G. Beck, of Nazareth, was killed early yesterday on the Nazareth-Belfast road. Mrs. Beck was returning from the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's meeting in Scranton.

Police said the driver of the car which struck the woman was from Scranton, but did not reveal his name.

Wildcat Attacks Farmer; Killed By Pitchfork

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., April 11.—An unusual encounter with a wildcat was reported here yesterday from Webster Springs.

While staking hay on his farm, Dane Lantz, of Mill Point, paused before a burrow with fork poised in hand. Just then there was a screech and a big wildcat leaped out, only to meet a fatal jab of the fork.

FOREIGN GROUP TO VISIT CITY

The Chamber of Commerce will be host to 100 foreign experts on training for the blind, who will be in Pittsburgh April 23. Representing 35 nations, the visitors will attend the World Conference for the Blind in New York next week, leaving at the close of sessions for a trip to the major cities of Eastern United States.

During their stay in Pittsburgh they will visit the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind, Second avenue; the Cathedral of Learning, and the Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind.

The committee in charge of the reception includes James Rae, Francis A. Keating, Frank Wilbur Main, H. Lee Mason, Jr., Harry W. Neely, Taylor Allderdice, Marcus Aaron, B. S. Joice, H. R. Latimer and J. W. Rickey.

SUSPECT SENT TO ILLINOIS

William Tracy Stallings, 34, alias W. T. King, alias "Little Alabam," was ordered removed to Springfield, Ill., by the Federal District Court, where he was said to be under a federal indictment charging violations of the Mann Act.

Stallings, according to government officers, is the man who was found in the hallway of a Fifth avenue apartment house Sunday morning, suffering from a severe scalp laceration, and was taken to the Mercy Hospital. At that time he was said to have been known as George Stone.

After being interrogated by detectives he was turned over to the federal authorities as a fugitive from justice. The indictment returned at Springfield accuses Stalling, under numerous alias, of transporting seven women to Bloomfield from Battle Creek, Mich., and Benton Harbor, Mich., October 15 and December 30, 1930.

CHINESE JAILED IN DOPE CASE

Yee Yick, 24, alias Yee Loule, a Chinese, was held for court by the United States commissioner on a charge of violating the Harrison narcotic act. Bond was set at $3,000.

Government narcotic agents believe him to be a "runner" for illicit drug sellers. They said that when they arrested him on Third avenue he had 200 grains of smoking opium in his possession. He was said to have worked as a laundryman and waiter since coming to this country nine years ago.

Two Die as Plane Crashes in Street

LOS ANGELES, April 11.—(AP.)—Two men were killed yesterday when a monoplane crashed in the street at Belvedere Gardens—a southwest suburb.

The victims were Dudley Strain, pilot, and Dr. Charles Cohencur, Los Angeles dentist. Wreckage was strewn in the front yard of a residence where Mrs. E. J. Robinson and her children were seated on a porch a few feet distant.

Auto Plants Report Rising Production

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 11.—(AP.)—A steadily rising curve of production since March was reported by five automobile manufacturing and assembly plants here.

While some seasonal increase was to be expected, officials said, the expansion exceeded the normal increase in March and April.

OBITUARY

McFarland Service.

Funeral services were to be held this afternoon for Caldwell McFarland, 65, of 1232 Sheridan avenue, who died Tuesday in his home. The services were to be held in the home and burial was to be in Homewood Cemetery. Mr. McFarland had been engaged in the dry goods business in East Liberty for many years. He was born in Ireland and came here in 1884. He was past commander of Duquesne Lodge No. 72, Knights Templar, and was a member of Hallman Lodge, F. and A. M., the Royal Arch Masons and of Syria Temple. He also was a member of the Stanton Heights Golf Club and the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Claire Baughman McFarland, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Watson, in Ireland.

Boles Funeral.

Funeral services were to be held today for Mrs. Ellen Armstrong Boles, who died Thursday in the home of her son, Edward F. Boles, at Wildwood, Pa. The services were to be held at 2:30 o'clock in the William Sloan funeral home, 7 East Ohio street. Mrs. Boles was a resident of the Pittsburgh district for 20 years. She leaves her husband, Richard Boles; two sons, Henry R. and Edward F. Boles, and 11 grandchildren.

POSTAL OFFERS FLIGHT SERVICE

NEW YORK, April 11.—Arrangements were completed yesterday between officials of the Postal Telegraph Cable Company and five of the largest American air transport companies so reservations for airplane travel can be made at all Postal Telegraph offices throughout the country.

The companies which have made the agreement with Postal Telegraph are Trans-Continental and Western Air, Inc.; Eastern Air Transport, Inc.; American Airways, Inc.; Western Air Express and Mid-Continental Air Express. This arrangement will go into effect on or about the first of May.

2 ASK $80,000 IN DAMAGES

C. C. Nesbit, of Edgewood, asked $50,000 for injuries in a fall down an elevator shaft, in a suit against the Union Switch and Signal Company filed in Common Pleas Court. Nesbit was employed as a master mechanic by the Wilbco Storage Battery Company, which, until its lease expired, occupied two floors of the Edgewood building of the defendant corporation.

While helping with the moving April 15, 1930, Nesbit walked into the first floor of the elevator shaft, the door of which was left opened, and fell 15 feet to the basement, sustaining serious injuries, according to the suit.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fazio, of 804 California avenue, Avalon, filed a suit in Common Pleas Court against C. D. Hodgdon, seeking to recover $30,000 damages for injuries to Mrs. Fazio, by an automobile. She was crossing California avenue at North Chestnut street, Avalon, April 7, 1930, to board a street car, when she was struck by an automobile driven by Hodgdon, according to the suit. She is unable to lift or use her right arm as a result, and her face is disfigured, the suit averred.

3 FACE HEARING IN DRY RAIDS

Three Ambridge men were being held in Central Police Station today for a hearing before the United States Commissioner following their arrest in two raids in Ambridge by prohibition agents yesterday.

Opiran Topolovicz was arrested when the agents raided a building in the rear of 287 Charles street, where 10 half-barrels of beer and 24 cases of gin were found, according to the agents.

A club on the second floor of a building at 287 Charles street, directly in front of the raided place, also was visited by the agents. Nick Suzich and Frank Prus were arrested when a pint of whisky was found in the place, agents reported.

SIFTWOMAN'S DEATH BY FIRE

The coroner's office today was investigating the death of Mrs. Catherine Philipi, 47, of Library, Bethel Township, who was reported to have set fire to her bed and clothing after drenching them with gasoline yesterday.

Mrs. Philipi, a former mental patient at Woodville, suffered burns which caused her death 10 hours later, according to the coroner's report. Her husband, whose garage adjoins his home, rushed into her room and smothered the flames with a blanket.

Owen Young Finds Mother Improved

VAN HORNESVILLE, N. Y., April 11.—(AP.)—Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company, was greeted on his arrival here from Chandler, Ariz., with the news that his mother, Mrs. Ida Young, 92, is certain to recover from her recent fall.

Woman Pays $8,500 For 'Money Machine'

CHICAGO, April 11.—(AP.)—When Mrs. Joseph Lepir first saw the machine it worked marvelously well, she told police, turning $5 bills out as fast as its operators would feed it green paper.

But when she took it home to Clinton, Ind., she found all its magic powers had vanished, she said, in asking Chicago police to find the two men who accepted the $8,500 she paid for the contraption in Terre Haute.

Man Carrying Bible Tracts Meets Death

GRANTSVILLE, Md., April 11 (AP.)—An unidentified elderly man carrying a Bible and numerous tracts was hit by an automobile truck near here last night and fatally injured. He was taken to the hospital at Frostburg and died without regaining consciousness.

THE SECRET SIX -:- By Frances Marion

Scorpio's Ruse Paves Way For Trio's Escape

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Louie Scorpio, known as "Slaughterhouse," is looked upon as a tough character. While in a disreputable restaurant he talks to the proprietor, Johnny Franks, and Nick Mizoski, known as the "Gouger." They ask him to join them in selling moonshine. Prompted by the great profits he will make, he consents. He accompanies them to the place where they make the stuff. While in the building police raid it. A Russian who had been helping to make the whisky is arrested, but the others elude the police and hide in another part of the building.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

As the policeman approached the packing cases, with lighted flashlights, Scorpio's brain suddenly cleared. He drew his revolver and slowly cocked it. Franks laid a restraining hand on his arm. The big fellow shook it off.

Under cover of the packing cases, Scorpio hurled the cocked weapon. It spun high over the fence into the alley, striking the ground with a report that shattered the stillness of the night.

With a yell, the policemen were over the fence, searching the alley. Scorpio, Franks and the Gouger let no grass grow under their feet. Into the rear alley they leaped, and crawled carefully along the enclosure. They emerged into the street, a block from the police guard in front of the tenement. Mixing with the crowds, they made their way back through the fog to the steak house.

"You got a bean, all right, Slaughterhouse," Franks congratulated the recruit. "That stall of throwing the rod away, so it would fog in the alley, was slick. Bet the John Laws will wonder a lot about it. Bulls is thick."

Rival Reporters

Scorpio grinned expansively. The inferiority complex that had assailed him, when he first went out with the gang, was vanishing. After all, he'd saved them all from a pinch. He wasn't so dumb, he meditated. Unconsciously, he swelled out his chest. Yes, he was going to be a big shot in this racket!

Hank Rogers, hurrying up the street, made for the nearest lighted store, the drug store on the corner. Hank was a Courier reporter. As he entered his eyes automatically singled out the two telephone booths. Into the nearest booth he hurried, without noticing another youth, busily engaged in flirting with a pretty blonde at the cigar counter.

Rather foppishly-dressed was the second man; dark, cynical in speech, and with an air of sophistication beyond his years. Carl Luckner had a way with women, which gained him many a "beat" over at the Star office. He was Hank's most active rival in the news field—and one of his best friends, outside of business hours.

He hurried to the second booth, and placed his ear against the wall, as Hank called up his office. No qualm of conscience smote Carl as he "listened in." The two were friends, after a newspaper fashion that the outside world can't understand.

They palled around together after work. They drank together, played together—and the next day would race to "scoop the pants" off each other.

It's an inherent trait in newspapermen. They can be loyal to their friends in their own chosen circle—and still be loyal, too, to the newspaper that employs them. And as in war or love, nothing's unfair in getting the news. Which was why Carl Luckner had no compunction whatever at "listening in" when Hank finally got his connection.

Report Story

"Dolan, the chief of police and a squad of cops just knocked over a still in Centro, under the old Wurtz tenement," he reported. "First booze raid ever held here."

"Hello, George!—Hank talking. Donlan and the cops grabbed off a hundred gallon still in a vacant building in Centro next to the church. Got a lot of gin, some alky, and pinched a Russian by the name of Vronski. No—he's just the cooker—a hired hand. There's a gang, but they got away. This Russian has been a Red agitator around the stockyards. And listen—tell the boss I'm goin' to stick around here a while. I think I got a line on that gang."

"Hello, Star! Gimme the Desk."

"Donlan and Centro cops raided a hundred gallon still in the old Wurtz building in Centro," he reported, "got a lot of gin and alky, and pinched a Russian named Vronski, a Red the gang hired as a cooker. Yes—a gang mixed up with it, but they got away. And say, listen. I'm going to stick around here in Centro for a while. I think I got a line on that gang!"

DAILY TRUE STORY

Spring!

Woman Informs Bachelor About Flower Garden

Mr. Tutlett stared through the window over the kitchen sink.

Five minutes before he had removed the egg stain from his breakfast plate, yet he stood there slowly and gently rubbing away at the plate with the dish mop, his mind on his trim back yard.

There were buds on the forsythia bush, tiny yellow buds. The iris was showing green shoots through its bed of peat moss and the willow in the corner was a feathery greenish yellow against the blue sky.

Mr. Tutlett eyed a boat-shaped cloud as it drifted aloft and sighed. It was almost an ecstatic sigh.

"Spring," he murmured, "is just about here."

Mr. Tutlett, being a bachelor and living alone, was in the habit of murmuring to himself.

This brought him back to his dishes. By resolutely keeping his eyes from staring through the window to the glorious signs of spring, he finished the dishes, put them away, hung up the dishpan and took his cap and leather jacket from the kitchen closet.

Repairs Trellis

He inhaled deeply as he stepped outside.

"It's great," he murmured.

Every year since he could remember the first hint of spring had made him feel sort of exalted. He couldn't describe it to himself in any other way.

His neat little cottage glistened with its new white paint. The front lawn was already getting rid of its winter brown and showing green.

Mr. Tutlett went to the workshop at the rear of his garage. The benches and settees were shiny and dry in their new paint. He set them out under the trees and beside the semi-circular hedge backing the lily pool.

Then he carefully detached his climbing rose, took down the trellis and repaired it. Mr. Tutlett did not hurry. He was not the hurrying sort. What he did he did well; there was no going over it again.

These gadgets were not to be sneezed at. They were small mechanical devices that he invented. Although he was only forty, he need not, if he were so inclined, ever putter over his work bench again. The gadgets had brought him sufficient royalties to make a man of his simple desires quite independent.

He deserved this success for he had worked 18 hours a day for many years. When he had been left alone at 20 he had to work to save the little home. It had been mortgaged to the hilt, as his lawyer explained.

So he had worked and succeeded.

At first few of the girls would have given him a second thought.

"Andy Tutlett?" they would say, and then laugh. "Why, he's as poor as poverty and he'll never get anywhere. He just putters around his yard and tinkers away at silly gimcracks."

So young Mr. Tutlett had no opportunity to marry when he was young, and by the time he had worked into his success he was quite out of the notion of marrying.

Quite a number of the girls he had smiled at in his youthful days—girls who had snubbed him—were secretly a bit sorry. It was no secret that Andrew Tutlett could "buy and sell" almost anyone in town.

Becomes Nervous

A woman was coming along the side path. Her rubber heels made no sound. She saw Mr. Tutlett at work and headed for him. In her hand was a small square handbag of black leather.

Mr. Tutlett lifted the trellis and stepped back just in time to bump into the woman.

"Oh — er — ah — sorry," Mr. Tutlett said.

He wasn't used to women. They made him nervous, because he never knew how to talk with them.

"Not at all, sir," the woman said. "I shouldn't have come barging along into you like that—a man has to have room to swing around in."

Dimples appeared in her red cheeks as she smiled and there was a flash of white teeth. Her eyes seemed friendly. Mr. Tutlett noted this. Most women, he believed, had only curiosity in their eyes or a little amusement, as if secretly making fun of him.

"You better put gloves on. Those thorns are bad, and it doesn't do the bush any good to rip off the thorns. Here, I'll hold it up with the rake while you tie it."

Mr. Tuttle was amazed. How did it ever happen? Here he was, working away with a darn pretty woman in his garden and he didn't even know her.

"I'm afraid I don't know you, ma'am," he said, as he removed his gloves and looked at her. She had taken a seat on the bench.

"No, sir, I guess you don't. I live in Moultonville and my name is Pottle."

Mr. Tutlett nodded.

"You must sort of love gardens, knowing that rose so easily, Mrs. Pottle."

"Gardens! I used to have a little tiny one, but after my husband died I lost the house and now I live in three rooms and only a cement court in the yard."

"That's terrible, Mrs. Pottle!"

"Oh, well, we have to do the best we can. I never see a garden but what I think of a verse—if I owned this beautiful garden I would have the verse cast in bronze and put up out here, right on that bird bath."

"What is the verse, Mrs. Pottle?"

"It goes—let me see—yes—it goes:

The song of the bird for mirth;
One is nearer God's heart in a garden
Than anywhere else on earth.'"

"That's wonderful. I read a lot, but I never knew that one——"

Rare Specimen

Oh, imagine!" Mrs. Pottle got up and went to the rock garden. "Why this is arabis! I haven't seen any since I was a little girl."

"Yes, and it's rare, pink instead of white."

For another hour the vivacious Mrs. Pottle talked flowers and shrubs and grasses and what-not with Mr. Tutlett.

"I must be going," she said, finally.

"Won't you come in and have tea and write out that verse for me, Mrs. Pottle—if you aren't afraid. I live alone."

"Afraid!" Mrs. Pottle laughed.

They had tea on the glassed-in back porch. She wrote out the verse. She admired his home, she raved over his garden.

"Spring—the sky and clouds and the little buds—it always gets me," she said, arising to go.

Mr. Tutlett saw tears in her eyes. This was terrible. Such a handsome woman, and so lonely—and she loved flowers and had only a cement court-yard, and he had all of this.

"Er—Mrs. Pottle—why not—er—why not stay here, with me?" Mr. Tutlett stammered.

"I—er—er—mean to sort of—that is, we'd be married—if you think you could stand for me."

"You dear, dear man!" Mrs. Pottle cried. "You are saying it because it is spring."

"Spring or whatever it is, I mean it—we could be married right now—only would you want to go far on a—er—wedding journey?"

"As far as the far end of this beautiful garden—and that's all. Oh, look—there's a bluebird!"

"He comes every year—this time I guess he's brought more happiness than usual," said Mr. Tutlett.

He had.

RAIL UMPIRE NEEDED

An outstanding national economic need is to seek means of arresting the shocking decline in railroad credit.

Under present conditions, none but an aristocracy of the strongest systems could raise new capital through the sale of securities to the public.

The will of Congress, as expressed in the transportation act of 1920, has been frustrated. Rates have not been such as to give the carriers a fair return on their property value, even in prosperous times.

IN THE CIRCUMSTANCES, THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION SHOULD NO LONGER BE SATISFIED WITH MERE RESTRICTIVE REGULATION.

In spite of the growth of competing agencies in transportation, the nation's business and agriculture are still mainly dependent on the railroads, which remain the principal national arteries.

ANY SUSTAINED DETERIORATION IN RAILROAD GROWTH AND EFFICIENCY WOULD CONSTITUTE AN ECONOMIC CALAMITY.

F. J. Lisman, railroad banker, recognizing the seriousness of the situation, makes a plea in the Railway Age for an umpire for the railway industry, who will concern himself with rates and competitive waste in the interest of the railways as a whole.

Depression offers a propitious occasion for putting the whole structure of railroad rates on a scientific basis.

In the present lull, there is golden opportunity to tackle the whole problem.

The chief job of an umpire or dictator, would be to exert leadership toward the elimination of economic waste in railroad management.

Much remains to be done to bring the traffic department up to the plane of efficiency already attained by the operating department of railways.

Reduction of unnecessary passenger service, which serves only a competitive purpose, would help to save millions for the railroads.

There is also vast wastage in the railroad package service, which should be critically reexamined.

Some voluntary restrictions should be placed on the custom of routing traffic over longer and more indirect routes for purely competitive reasons.

If the proposed railroad co-ordinator surrounded himself with a staff of experts, dedicated to the problem of rehabilitating railroad credit, instead of tearing it down, he could also well devote himself to leadership in modernizing railroad service.

As Mr. Lisman points out, railroads have been laggards in research and experimentation.

A growing co-operative spirit among railway executives, who could interchange new ideas and policies through the umpire, might help also to expedite desirable economic mergers, such as the four-system consolidation in the East, which President Hoover has sponsored.

Eleven years ago Congress formulated its new policy of letting the railroads live and prosper, and it should make such amendments to the basic law as may be necessary to permit scientific and progressive management of the railroads.

Public regulation can and must make sure that the public shares fully in the benefits resulting from the changes advocated.

AN AMERICAN GIRL AND A JAPANESE GIRL

GERMAN WOMEN AS TRUCK HORSES. THEIR LOADS ARE NOT AS HEAVY AS THEY SEEM

Pope remarked that the dull ox was surprised because sometimes he plowed the sod, sometimes was used as a sacrifice and sometimes was "Egypt's God."

Woman might be surprised by the strange parts that she plays, and you might be surprised also, as you examine these and other pictures published in The American Weekly, issued with the Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow.

The little American girl, dressed, more or less, as a traffic cop, on the left above, enjoyed her brief experience regulating traffic in Miami. Motorists also enjoyed it, and several of them bumped into each other. Such is the sensitive nature of man.

Next to the little American girl, as easy to look at as a pansy in full bloom, is an unhappy little Japanese child-mother. Her duty is to carry her heavy little brother around on her back, instead of playing in the sunshine freely, as she should do. Her mother must work in the rice fields, and someone must take care of the baby. The Japanese are devoted to children, and what ought to interest western fathers and mothers —NO JAPANESE CHILD IS EVER BEATEN.

The Picture of women with big loads was taken in the Thuringian Forest in Germany. The labor of women is much cheaper than that of horses or trucks, and in this case, safer. The loads are not as heavy as they look. The women carry delicate little glass globes, used to decorate Christmas trees. Skill, rather than strength, is needed for this work. BRUCE, MICROBE HUNTER

By Archibald Henderson

There has always been a magic, a romance, about shooting big game. The larger the animal, or the fiercer its disposition, the greater the glory of its extermination. If the wild beast is large, formidable and dangerous, the killing of it is a real achievement. Big game hunters used to be content to return from Africa with trophies, horns, tusks, skins of fierce creatures they had slain. Now they carry a moving picture machine into the jungle, and send on to the rotogravure section pictures of themselves in action, taken at the very minute of killing the savage creature of forest, river and plain.

But what of the tiny enemies of mankind, which slay their tens of thousands while the huge beasts are slaying only their tens of hundreds? Is there not far greater glory for higher honors due those who exterminate or render harmless those deadly pests of the human race? The world is awakening to the magnitude of honoring the gallant band of microbe hunters.

Among those thus honored will always stand the name of David Bruce. This giant figure, accompanied by a most devoted and faithful co-worker, his wife, devoted years of his life to the most determined, dangerous and exhausting researches under the most trying circumstances to fight one of the great scourges of mankind.

Bruce was a soldier in the British army. But he was not a man-killer by preference; his passion was bacteriology. The discoveries of Theobald Smith had attracted his interest—those researches by which Smith had proved that death may be carried by a tick, and only by a tick, from one animal to another. While stationed on the Island of Malta in the Mediterranean, he became interested in what was called Malta fever and was determined to discover its cause. Although his salary was only a thousand dollars a year, they fixed up a wretched little work-room they dignified by the name of laboratory. And by the dogged persistence which the British call muddling through," they finally discovered the microbe of Malta fever.

Before he had discovered how the disease was transmitted—a discovery he made 20 years later—he was ordered away from Malta. A new chapter in his career begins in 1894, when as Surgeon-Major and with his wife as assistant, he goes to Zululand to study the disease called "Nagana." The translation of this word is "depressed and low spirited." So Bruce and his wife establish a modest laboratory at Ubombo and set to work. It is not long before they have discovered trypanosomes in the blood of animals suffering from Nagana. Step by step, through hundreds of experiments with stricken animals they proceed until they prove that the tsetse fly is the carrier of the disease. And finally he showed that the trypanosomes lurk in the blood of wild game and are carried to domestic animals by the tsetse fly.

In efforts to stem the sleeping sickness epidemic and to discover its cause, Bruce, accompanied by his wife, was sent, after the Boer War, by the Royal Society to the region of Lake Victoria Nyanza. Through the aid of Apolo, the native dictator, Bruce succeeded in eliminating the sleeping sickness from this region. The carrier was once more his old enemy, under a new name—Kiou. It was the tsetse fly. But the battle against sleeping sickness goes on today. Bruce clarified the problem, but he did not solve it. The work of this fly fighter and his devoted wife is among the most inspiring in the entire history of microbe hunting and fighting.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 11.—I'm fairly handy around the house so long as they don't get me up on step-ladders. Even then I'm not so bad if I don't look down. But if I look down everything begins to whirl and the next thing I know they are asking me how I feel and fanning me.

It started several weeks ago when somebody hung a picture facing my chair in the dining room. From the start it looked out of kilter and every time they tried to fix it it got worse. I'm not so all fired artistic, but a picture hung cock-eyed annoys me.

This morning I could stand it no longer and, pushing back my chair after breakfast, asked for the stepladder. My wife intimated that, as the picture was somewhat valuable, it might be well to call in a professional hanger. "And pay him $5 for something I can do in two minutes!" I snapped.

She replied: "All right, Steeple Jack," and flounced out. Any time she acts that may my dander is up. So I had the stepladder brought. It is one of those white enameled affairs that folds up into a kitchen chair. It's so tricky I expect Joe Cook could toot a tune on it.

A very patient servant unhooked and unwound it and ventured: "I'll hold it steady for you." I replied coldly that I guessed I could hang a picture without calling out the militia. My wife—she would—passed through the room just then to sneer: "Doing it without a net?"

It shows what I have to put up with. I haven't even the run of my home. Sometimes I think I will just quietly disappear, and get away from it all—vanish in the jungles and get all bit up by leopards and stung by scorpions. Hooked by a rhinocerous wouldn't be bad either.

Anyway when the room was cleared I shook the stepladder to see if it was all buttoned up properly, pushed it over near the canvas and began to climb. I tried to reach the picture from the fourth step but could just touch it so it swung over to one side.

* * *

Then I had to get down and move the stepladder nearer. (Stick around, there'll be action later.) On the fifth step I was able to touch it again and the blamed thing swung clear back to the other side. I made up my mind I wasn't going to be running up and down stepladders playing tag with pictures all day, so I got my big dictionary and placed it on the top step. With that I could touch the ceiling. Are you following?

* * *

Well, here we go! Nobody skipped more gracefully up to the top of the ladder than I. Somewhere I read that those affected by height could master it by never looking down and concentrating on some incident that happened long ago. That was dandy, but the only thing I could think of in the long ago was the time I fell out of the hay mow and lit on a hay rake. That was the day they carried me home on Mrs. Heisner's shutter. Mrs. Heisner's grandson, Harry Maxon, brought two of my teeth later—all magnified in a bottle of water.

* * *

Anyway I reached the last step of the ladder with no more giddiness than one might have in one of those swooping dips of the Mauretania. I put one foot on the dictionary and it seemed firm enough. But right here I want to warn the world never trust a dictionary on top of a step ladder. When I put my entire weight upon it something happened. It just sort of skidded our flat—bla-a-a, like that. As the drowning man grabs for a straw I grabbed for the picture. It held for a little while. Then I looked down and everything let go!

heavy loads. An English railroad company got permission to build from the sea level to the heights of a Chinese city where the rich dwelt. Permission was given on condition that the rail WOULD CARRY NO FREIGHT. After the railroad was built, passengers going up the steep hill saw women and men carrying up bricks and mortar on their backs. They would not let the railroad deprive them of that work.

KILLED FOR KNOWING TOO MUCH

Racketeers and killers of gangland apparently believe in "full equality for women." At least, they believe that the woman gangster, like the male gangster, knowing too much, and inclined to talk, should be disposed of, without loss of time.

Anne Urbas, on the left above, knew too much about New York gambling. Her body was found in the river. Mrs. Alta Bonnello, on the right, was to testify at the trial of her husband in a $12,000 robbery case. She was beaten to death the day before the trial began.

GAMBLING AT A DIVORCE COLONY

Women slaves, women gangsters, women gambling away money that they did not earn—The American Weekly tells about them all in the Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow. Of course, men are to blame, not women. Men encourage the foolishness of women, exploit the slavery of women, permit gambling and the easy divorce that helps to degrade women.

Text for Today For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.—I. Timothy, vi:10.
